Animania Park employs 83 people in full or part-time positions and each year uses some volunteers and casual workers. For most of the posts, new employees do not need specialist skills, as all the training is given on the job. As a centre for conservation, Animania Park is committed to a ‘green’ sustainable future.

- (d) Assess the benefits of asking applicants to fill in an application form online rather than Animania Park sending out an application pack.

2. James and Carlos are assistant keepers at Animania Park. They have the same working responsibilities. Both have had one week of initial training. James has worked there for six months and Carlos, just one month, having recently arrived from Spain. Carlos is not happy to find that James gets paid £1 an hour more than him and gets five weeks' holiday to his four.

Both work unsupervised and have been involved in accidents while lifting heavy boxes of feed (not for the first time). They have also had near escapes when allowed to enter the lion enclosure unsupervised. They have both noticed that some of the fencing from this enclosure is broken but their supervisor has told them to ignore it as 'it's been like it for a long time'.

- (a) With reference to specific Acts, explain how Animania Park is not complying with legislation.

Animania Park has a mix of employment types. Apart from the volunteers, there are full-time staff in the main administration block, together with some part-time staff. A number of employees are on seasonal contracts and sometimes self-employed experts are employed.

The zoo has many more visitors in the summer – particularly in the school holidays. To increase its income it encourages school parties to visit. It runs courses aimed at all levels from primary to GCE A Level. In the winter it also runs more specialist courses for students from the nearby university.

- (d) Analyse the benefits that Animania Park might gain from having a variety of employment types.

3. Trevor is an assistant groundsman. His record of sickness and absence is the zoo's worst. He is often late to work and fails to return to his duties on time after scheduled breaks. His line manager has noticed that some tasks have not been completed, although what Trevor does do, he does well. His references from his previous post show that he was a very good worker there.

His line manager has told him verbally that he is not satisfied with his work and must improve and now wants management to give him a written warning, stating that unless he improves he will be sacked.

The recent recession has meant that there has been a drop in visitor numbers to Animania Park. Therefore, it has reduced its costs of animal upkeep by reducing the number of exotic species that require specialist food and enclosures. In winter some species are moved to a larger zoo elsewhere. The management has now decided that redundancies amongst the staff may be needed.

- (c) (i) Explain why Animania Park may have to make staff redundant.

4. Animania Park's human resources department has decided that Trevor could be a valuable member of staff. They need to decide on a motivational technique to help him improve. One suggestion has been to offer him better remuneration, with a higher salary or perhaps more perks.
- (a) Explain why it would not be appropriate to offer a salary increase or more perks to Trevor.

The overall level of staff motivation is low. The threat of redundancies means that many staff are worried about their jobs.

Much of the zoo's equipment is out-of-date. The booking system is ten years old and difficult to work with. Animania Park covers a large area and the workforce often have to walk back to the main block for lunch or in the course of their work. The old 'walkie-talkie' system of communication does not always work. As a result, information does not always get to the right people and staff working further away feel isolated from the rest.

The management team thinks that many of the staff are not working to their full potential and wishes to increase their motivation.

- (b) Evaluate the use of a positive working environment as a means of motivating the workforce at Animania Park.
