Evidence A Living the Chinese Dream

Xu Weiping set up ABP (Advanced Business Parks) in China in 2003. ABP has established a strong track record for developing large-scale enterprise districts in China. As an experienced and successful developer, Mr Xu has built a reputation for investing in and transforming areas in need of regeneration, so helping businesses succeed and generate economic growth.

In May 2013, Mr Xu struck a deal with London Mayor Boris Johnson to spend £1bn to develop London's Royal Albert Dock as the first Asian Business Park in the UK. The spotlight has fallen onto Mr Xu and he seems to be enjoying it.

Known for his love of fashion, Mr Xu states that, for him, fashion means "endless creativity and imagination". He goes on to say "imagination is what we need when we work, especially in developing property. Our UK architects are great on details but I lead their imagination."

Mr Xu has his critics who point to unfinished and unoccupied buildings on previous sites. He appears unconcerned by these critics. He states, "It is normal for people to doubt because such large projects are very challenging. The site developed in Beijing was much worse than the Royal Albert Dock and is now our business district. In China 10 years ago, many people doubted I could succeed. I have confidence in myself and the team".

Plans for ABP include expansion across several continents. The aim is for a step-by-step approach for investment and development in line with each local economy, which will lead to their economic development and create significant job opportunities.

Evidence B Boris signs £1bn deal to regenerate the Royal Albert Dock

The deal with ABP will create London's third major business district and is expected to generate £6bn for the UK economy. The development will include 2.5 million square feet of office space, plus retail and leisure facilities.

The first tenants are expected to move in from 2017. Mayor Johnson states the area's development will create "tens of thousands of jobs and billions of pounds of investment for the UK economy."

City Hall says ABP will work with UK developer Stanhope and architects Farrell to develop an initial 600,000 square feet and that 'strong interest' has been shown by Chinese companies and banks looking for a European presence.

ABP chairman Xu Weiping says, "This project will be hugely significant for both Chinese and UK economies. My vision is to develop a world class international business district which will initially target Asian businesses to help them secure a destination in London, which in China is seen as the gateway to both the United Kingdom and the wider European economy."

Evidence C Chinese investments in the UK top £8bn in one year

Mr Xu cheerfully admits he doesn't yet have the money for the Royal Albert Dock. "The project will be developed in five phases. Each phase costs about £200m so there is no need for me to have £1bn in cash."

ABP will invest retained profit for 30% of the project and 30% would come from rent and sales revenue of the project. ABP will consider loans from European banks, share issues, funds from private equity firms to raise the remaining capital. "We intend to raise the remaining funds overseas," Mr Xu said, adding that financing in overseas markets was "more transparent and can be on a larger scale". Exchange rates will be reviewed constantly to optimise the potential investments.
