SECTION B

Answer ALL questions in this section.

You should spend 60 minutes on this section.

Evidence A: What is next for the fast food giant?

In the UK, every day three million people eat at a McDonald's restaurant and 90% of the population has eaten a McDonald's at some point. Last year, around 90 million Big Macs were sold, although this was lower than the peak of 100 million in 2011, which the company claims is because of the introduction of more wraps and deli sandwiches to the menu.

In the past few years, McDonald's has undergone something of a menu overhaul. Once, the dilemma was whether to go for a milkshake or a soft drink. Now you can order a strawberry and banana fruit smoothie with your McChicken Sandwich. The menu is about to be transformed once again, when the chain launches a new wrap range. It will spice things up by introducing barbecue, sweet chilli and hot Peri Peri chicken wraps.

The menu isn't the only thing changing – McDonald's is in the middle of a £350m update of its restaurants. After trialling table service at 15 restaurants, waiter service will be rolled out across the UK. All restaurants are also being fitted with “digital kiosks”, giant iPad-like devices that give customers a self-service option and means that they don't have to queue at the till.

Evidence B: McDonald's UK boss defends zero-hours contracts for staff

Paul Pomroy, the boss of McDonald's in the UK, has defended the company's continued use of zero-hours contracts for about 80,000 employees in its British restaurants. Zero-hour contracts have attracted criticism as employees have no guarantee of work and are often called in at short notice. Pomroy said, “We still have zero-hours contracts and they are very flexible contracts, so people at McDonald's get their shifts two weeks in advance and we allow employees to go and work elsewhere. We have a very good system of feedback from our employees and having surveyed our employees they still love the flexibility.”

McDonald's said all of its employees had permanent contracts and were entitled to holiday and sick pay, staff discounts, training to gain nationally-recognised qualifications and regular performance reviews. As well as being free to work elsewhere, employees are not required to be on call, the company said.

Evidence C: The sourcing of McDonald's menu ingredients

All of McDonald's beef and milk is sourced from more than 17,500 British and Irish farmers. McDonald's source the majority of the potatoes for their French Fries from two suppliers in the UK and have used them for over 30 years. The only products McDonald's imports from elsewhere tend to be seasonal, such as pineapple and strawberries for its smoothies, as well as coffee. Some of its chicken is also imported from abroad including Thailand and Brazil. 5

Evidence D: McDonald's reducing waste, recycling more

Our goal is simple – to do our best to improve our impact on the environment. All of our activities are centred around the key priorities of reduce, reuse and recycle. Our ambition is to recycle at least 50% of our waste and divert the remaining waste to Energy Recovery Facilities, rather than going to landfill rubbish sites. 5

All McDonald's restaurants have processes in place to reduce the amount of food wasted, by using Just in Time inventory control, ordering and production systems. We are continually looking to reduce the amount of material we use in packaging. For example, we reduced the size of our tray liners and resized our Big Mac® boxes, which resulted in a saving of approximately 434 tonnes of paper each year. 10

We recycle most of the waste from restaurant kitchens including plastic and paper packaging, used cooking oil, corrugated cardboard and food waste. The used cooking oil is recycled into biodiesel, which is used to help fuel our delivery fleet, saving over 6,000 tonnes of CO2 each year. The used cooking oil, cardboard and kitchen food waste is collected by the vehicles that have delivered food and packaging to the restaurants. Using the delivery trucks in this way saves an additional 5,000 trips per year. 15
