Section A: Language

Unprepared Translation and Comprehension

1 Read the passage and answer all the questions.

Some years before the events of the play, Agamemnon had been murdered by his wife Klytaimestra and her lover Aigisthos. Agamemnon's son Orestes has now returned home and, in collaboration with his sister Elektra, has killed Klytaimestra. Here they are forcing Aigisthos to go into the palace where Agamemnon was killed.

AIG: Now I understand; you are Orestes.

OR: You have been a long time in realising that: I thought you were supposed to be a prophet.

AIG: Then it is all over for me. But wait – just let me say a few things –

Aristophanes, Frogs 83-102

- (b) 'We cannot safely attribute seriousness of purpose to a comic dramatist.' Judging from the above passage and from the remainder of the play, can Aristophanes' literary criticism in the Frogs be seen as serious? [25]

You are reminded that marks are awarded for the quality of written communication of your answer.

| 2(b) | 'We cannot safely attribute seriousness of purpose to a comic dramatist.' Judging from the above passage and from the remainder of the play, can Aristophanes' literary criticism in the Frogs be seen as serious? <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Dionysus and Herakles are discussing the state of tragic poetry at Athens to establish why D needs Euripides back. • Agathon gets a good report: but is it only for his poetry? ποθεινὸς τοῖς φίλοις; • Xenoklees doesn't bear thinking about; Pythangelos doesn't even get a review; • But E himself gets rather a mixed one: he was λάλος, even though no one can produce a ῥήμα γενναῖον as he could, and the quotations D especially likes (though he gets at least one wrong) don't do a lot for his reputation. So the level of criticism here is hardly high, and the points D likes in a tragedian are rather questionable (though, of course, they present a point of view, and in a limited sense constitute 'lit crit'). The same double-edged attitude is evident throughout (no doubt primarily for humorous purposes), and candidates will no doubt offer differing views as to why and whether there can be said to be any underlying seriousness. Many points may be made, and plenty of references to the ληκύθιον scene (which is prescribed in Greek) are to be expected. Points that might be made in favour of A's literary expertise (though not necessarily indicating his 'purpose') might include: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • his skill in parodying the language of the two tragedians; • his (quite detailed) knowledge of the plots of a considerable number of their plays; • his analyses of the mechanics of their plots and their subject-matter (Some detailed references to the text should be made to back up such points.) Points against 'serious' lit crit going on might include: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • the ludicrousness of the situation, and of individual aspects, such as weighing the verses, or the over-the-top nature of much of the parody • the abusive behaviour of the tragedians towards each other • the fact that much of the criticism comes down to moral, rather than literary, criteria (e.g. the decider questions: what to do about Alcibiades, and how to save the city) | |

| 2(b) cont'd | Conclusion: A is clearly a highly competent literary critic, and has a highly skilled eye for all aspects of the playwright's art; but lit crit isn't what he's really about... A is clearly a serious student of dramatic technique, and this emerges constantly; but he's also a comic playwright, and it's never really safe to say that a comedian has any serious purpose... Candidates might also refer to the socio-political angle: whether you like E or Aes says something about you, and about your society, etc. | [25] |

Quality of Written Communication (QWC): The QCA Guidance for Awarding Bodies stipulates that QWC should be assessed when answers require paragraphs or essays, not single sentences.

The QCA Guidance stipulates that all three strands of QWC must be explicitly addressed – hence in the AO2 Marking Grid the presence of bullet points 3–5.

There are no separate weightings for AOs 2a and 2b but, in assigning a mark for AO2, examiners should focus first on AO2(a) – ie bullet points 1 and 2 – to decide the appropriate Level. They should then consider the evidence of QWC to help them decide where within the Level it is best to locate the candidate's mark. Other evidence, for example a stronger showing on the analysis than on the evaluation strand of AO2a, will also inform an examiner's decision about where to locate the mark within the Level.
