You need to be very attentive and careful about your documents, luggage and health during your India travel.

Things to remember

When you board an overcrowded local buses keep your eye on the luggage. Try to keep it close to you.

If leaving your luggage for anywhere, for any reason, padlock it to a pipe, a bedstead or anything that cannot be moved. Some hotels will keep it for you, but always get a receipt and always check that nothing's missing on your return.

On streets keep all money in zipped pockets.

When you travel by train in India, use your ruck-sack or bag as a pillow (or stash it under your knees) when sleeping. If going to the bathroom, bolt your bag to a fixed compartment attachment or to a window bar.

In cheap lodging, double-lock the door (with combination padlock) and secure all windows before retiring for the night-thieves are adept at creeping into unsecured hotel rooms.

Keep all your important documents like passport, health certificate, international driving permit with you always.

Most of the diseases in India are water born there for always keep a flask of boiled water with you and never eat anything from shops or stalls which serve uncovered eatables.
