Where appropriate you should make reference to other political systems, as well as the European Union.

Section A

Answer the question in this section.

Use the source and your own knowledge to answer Question 1.

Source for Question 1

Political authority is often seen as a specific branch of power. Politicians talk about acquiring authority from a variety of different sources, most notably via the consent of the electorate. Yet the extent of authority a politician enjoys varies enormously, dependent upon a variety of factors including their personality and the circumstances in which they find themselves. According to the German writer Max Weber (1864–1920) there are three main types of authority: traditional, legal-rational and charismatic.
