1. Mrs Wilkins is 66 years of age and is in the early stages of Alzheimer's disease. She is sometimes forgetful and confused. Mrs Wilkins also suffers from arthritis for which she takes medication. She has one daughter, Isobel, who is married and lives some distance away. Isobel can only visit once a week and is increasingly concerned for her mother's safety because there is also some evidence of an alcohol problem.

Isobel has been in contact with social services and a social worker has visited Mrs Wilkins. During one conversation with the social worker Mrs Wilkins made it clear that she wanted to stay in her own home. Isobel does not think this is a good idea. She would prefer for her mother to move into a residential home. This has caused tension between Mrs Wilkins and her daughter.
