Sources for use with Section A.

Source 1: From a speech made by Muhammad Ali Jinnah, 6 December 1945. Jinnah made this speech in response to an announcement that a Parliamentary Delegation would visit India in 1946 to begin discussions on the shape of Indian Independence.

No agreement will be possible till the Pakistan issue is solved. I therefore call on His Majesty's Government to agree to the establishment of Pakistan in India. Muslim India will never accept a Constitution with a National Government for all India, in which the Muslims will be in a tiny minority. Nor will they agree to any federal Indian Constitution, in which, again, they will be in a hopeless minority, and will be at the mercy of Hindu majority domination. 5

The Hindus and the Muslims are two major nations living in this sub-continent, and there are Muslim Provinces and Hindu Provinces. It is high time that the British Government applied their mind definitely to the division of India and the establishment of Pakistan and Hindustan, which means freedom for both. 10

Source 2: From the Report of the Disorders Inquiry Committee, published 1920. The Committee of seven members, including three Indians, was led by Lord Hunter. Here it is reporting its conclusions on General Dyer's actions at the Jallianwala Bagh in April 1919.

The Committee criticises General Dyer for two reasons, (1) that he opened fire without warning, and (2) that he went on firing after the crowd had begun to disperse. On the first point, the Committee point out that General Dyer does not suggest that there was an emergency which justified his decision to fire on the crowd without warning. He stated that his mind was made up that, if his orders were disobeyed, he was going to fire at once. The Committee thinks it unlikely that the crowd would have dispersed without being fired on. Nevertheless, they say that a warning would have given an opportunity for people to leave. It is also the Committee's opinion that General Dyer committed a grave error in continuing to fire as long as he did, even after the crowd had begun to disperse. However, they consider that he honestly believed that he was called upon to take this step in the discharge of his duty. 15

The Committee finds further that it was his intention to create a moral effect throughout the Punjab and they condemn this as a mistaken conception of his duty. In conclusion, the Committee does not accept the view that General Dyer's action saved the situation and prevented a rebellion on a scale similar to the Mutiny. 25
