6IN01 Unit 1: Spoken Expression and Response in Italian

In this Unit candidates are required to demonstrate their understanding of a short Italian text (linked to one of the general topic areas of the AS specification) and to engage in general discussion on the same topic area. The candidates' understanding of the text is tested by 4 questions posed by their teacher/examiner (TE), who then develops the conversation into a more general discussion of the topic area chosen by the candidate before the test. The general topic areas are as follows:

- Youth culture and concerns
- Lifestyle: health and fitness
- The world around us: travel, tourism, environmental issues and the Italian-speaking world
- Education and employment

Candidates are free to choose any of the four general topic areas, according to their preference and interests. They should be advised to choose a topic area with which they are familiar and which they are prepared to discuss in detail. They will need to research their chosen area and undertake reading from a variety of sources. Candidates are given 15 minutes prior to their examination to prepare their stimulus text. During this time, they should study the text with a view to answering questions about it, offering their opinions about the subject of the text and the related subtopic, and to discussing the subject of the text in more detail. The Oral form (see Appendix 1 in the specification) must be completed with the general topic area chosen by the candidate and the number of the stimulus used.

Assessment Principles

Up to 50 marks are awarded positively using the appropriate grids for:

- Quality of Language (16 marks - 8 for Accuracy and 8 for Range of Lexis)
- Response (20 marks)
- Understanding (14 marks - 4 Stimulus specific and 10 related to the General Topic area)

Candidates' Responses

The majority of centres that entered candidates for the AS oral examination in Italian should, in general terms, be congratulated on the thoroughness of their preparation. Many centres kept to the spirit of the examination, in allowing candidates to speak in a natural way within the broad topic area of discussion. As in previous years, a good number of candidates reached commendable levels of linguistic competence. Many candidates were able to sustain their discussion well and offer interesting slants in their opinion of given topics.

There were still some cases of over-rehearsal, although fewer centres appear to have tried this approach than had been the case in the past. The importance of spontaneity must be stressed in relation to performances that can only be described as:

- stage-managed, in which candidates have learned everything by heart for the whole of Part B and at times spend 8 minutes regurgitating information, often leaving out bits so that the conversation becomes largely meaningless.

- monologue, with little or no teacher participation.
- one centre, one topic, when a class had studied the same topic and TE rotates the same ‘unpredictable’ questions to all candidates (all of whom had learned the answers more or less well).

This is often done in complete good faith but the lack of spontaneity severely limits the marks for Response. The repetition of language, often far above the candidates’ real level of competence, can only result in poor levels of accuracy.

PART A

As in previous years, a number of candidates found the initial text and its questions too complex. Most candidates now expect a question of the type – Di quale situazione parla il brano? This year many candidates offered answers beginning with il brano tratta di.... or more simply il brano parla di... without difficulty. Question 2 was answered more convincingly by those candidates who chose to summarise their answer rather than use the text directly. Candidates continue to need practice in both oral and written summary to answer competently the first two questions of the initial text, although there were fewer cases of candidates relying too heavily on the wording of the text. Some better candidates had been encouraged to give full answers to Q1 and pre-empted Q2. Q3 and 4, being more general, were answered well by better candidates, who put forward very interesting opinions and ideas and produced well developed answers. These questions also showed up the weaknesses of other candidates, who performed better in part B, as they had been able to prepare this. Some candidates offered little expansion and did not cover the required time needed to be spent on the first part of the oral exam.

PART B

This was on the whole well done, and candidates seemed less inclined to simply deliver pre-learnt material, which is very encouraging. All centres are well aware of the need for breadth of vocabulary within given topic areas and many candidates prepared themselves exceptionally well for this aspect of the examination. A number of candidates, however, still have an inadequate command of several verb tenses, including the present. Many centres continue to present candidates who perform well in this examination and who show that they are serious in their approach to language study. In some cases, the candidates’ performance was affected by the quality of questions asked. General questions such as: Dove andrai in vacanza? Qual è la tua materia preferita? are inadequate for this level and hence do not allow the candidate to reach high grades

This year, the topic areas Lifestyle, Health and Fitness and Youth culture and concerns were the most popular, with The world around us and Education and Employment chosen by a significant minority this year.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Stimulus 1: candidates had no problems in understanding questions 1 and 2. Question 3 and 4, on the other hand, proved more taxing for some and even some more able candidates were unable to think beyond the text. Qualities employers appreciate most seemed to be tidiness, positive attitude and appearance. Common stereotypes were laziness and lack of organisation.

Stimulus 2: some candidates had problems with the meaning of the word rendimento. The value of exams was generally not recognised and the majority of candidates who responded to Q 3, believed exams are a useful tool for teachers, for the purpose of assessment and differentiation but not for candidates. Many candidates thought the government should introduce new, more practical subjects in the curriculum. The gap between education and the world of work seems to have become smaller and the need for learning about taxes and general financial matters appear much greater than learning subjects such as Greek or Latin.

THE WORLD AROUND US

This topic area was evocative and the candidates' obvious intrinsic interest in the environment clearly acted as a springboard to develop other topics such as climate change and natural disasters, the use and development of sustainable energy, the protection of flora and fauna. Candidates also discussed the impact of tourism on the environment and its contribution to climate change but were generally supporting the need for travel and the importance of improving transport. A more responsible attitude to local issues concerning pollution in the cities and urban planning was the main focus. This was once again the least popular topic area and was chosen by candidates with a keen interest in and a detailed knowledge and understanding of environmental threats and concerns. Candidates who chose this topic area showed good knowledge and understanding of climate change, pollution, recycling and tourism, producing excellent informative discussions.

In a limited number of cases, the questions asked in part B were limited to personal travelling experiences or preferences and generated a simple and plain conversation, rather than the discussion required at this level. Questions such as: Ti ricordi qualche vacanza molto bella del tuo passato? Che cosa hai fatto? Che cosa hai visto? ... did not develop discussions suitable to AS level.

Stimulus 1: showed that candidates are very aware of cycling as a green, sustainable form of transport and had some good ideas about how cyclists should be protected in the future. The relevant vocabulary was understood and used well in context.

Stimulus 2: confirmed that candidates are in tune with environmental issues and care about the planet and its conservation. The type of questions elicited longer responses compared to other topic areas and as a result, teachers often did not create a cut-off point between parts A and B, with the result that some candidates were not able to explore other subtopics successfully.

YOUTH CULTURE AND CONCERNS

Once again, the most popular topic area.

Stimulus 1: both cards were well understood and answers generally detailed and pertinent. The vast majority of candidates felt family and school need to co-operate to provide greater support and help youngsters manage their time using technology. However, candidates often recognised that as parents and teachers work in a technological world, it is difficult to justify reducing candidates' access.

Stimulus 2: this did not pose any issues, with the exception of Q3 where more-able candidates had informed opinions about the attitude of parents whereas some less-able candidates were often referring directly to the text and got confused.

In the general discussion, a recurrent point of debate was the family and social relationships and how technology and social media have had an impact on strengthening or weakening these ties. Music and fashion play an important role in providing youngsters with role-models, directions, trends, and an opportunity to express both individuality and encourage integration.

LIFESTYLE, HEALTH AND FITNESS

Another very popular topic area.

Stimulus 1: some candidates misunderstood the beginning of the text stating that sugar is as dangerous as smoking, missing the detail that scientists suggested labelling should be used on sweet products in the same way as health warnings labels on cigarette packets. Question 3 in Card A did not always elicit an exhaustive response and in some cases candidates referred back to the text and the idea of labels.

Stimulus 2: the consequences of excessive physical activity were identified by the majority of candidates who understood its effect on the heart and the tendency to eat more and more often.

Candidates seem to have a good knowledge of this Topic Area, particularly in relation to food and sport. The transition between stimulus content onto other subtopics was not always clear and the questions in section B seemed stuck between physical activity to keep fit and a healthy diet. This was a pity as it limited ideas being expressed and often stifled the conversation.

The level of debate was at times mundane and on occasions was reduced to GCSE-style questions. Uninspiring questions (Che cosa mangi per colazione/pranzo/cena/a scuola/a casa/quando esci con gli amici?) would only elicit bland responses. Asking the same structured questions like: Cosa dovrebbe fare il governo/la scuola ... cosa dovrebbero fare i genitori ... per promuovere uno stile di vita più sano? – did not allow the candidates to develop and perform to the best of their abilities. Questions such as: Se vincessi alla lotteria cosa faresti per mantenerti in forma? and L'anoressia è ancora diffusa? can jeopardise the performance of even the best candidates.

Candidates' performance in terms of linguistic criteria showed one of the highest levels of competency in recent years, giving the impression that both candidates and their teachers were significantly more aware of the nature and aims of the examination: notwithstanding this, the range was wide and well distributed, from excellent performances – above specification requirements – to a moderate but nevertheless an extension of the linguistic skills required at GCSE level.

Among the native English candidates use of correct grammar was more frequent than in previous years. Candidates had little difficulty in expressing their opinion with phrases such as Penso che sia or Sono del parere che... Some candidates created an unfortunate initial impression with il testo parla che... rather than il testo dice che.... Nonetheless, this year there appeared to be a better grasp of basic grammar.

Weak areas continue to be adjectival agreement, the infinitive after modal verbs and direct and indirect object pronouns. Nonetheless, in broad terms, many candidates gave an able performance as regards accuracy and have an adequate command of the use of the subjunctive. Sometimes this knowledge of the subjunctive remained theoretical and in practice verbs of thinking were often followed by the indicative when the subjunctive might have been better. Some candidates are unaware that a verb form such as vorrei che... or mi piacerebbe che... must be followed by an imperfect subjunctive and not, as is the case in French, with a present subjunctive. Some weaker candidates are still insecure in their knowledge of the present tense indicative and tend to skim over the verb ending, leaving an overall bad impression.

The weakest candidates spoke frequently with only the infinitive verb form, expressed as the main verb or avoided the use of verbs throughout. As usual, there were a significant number of GCSE-type mistakes, for example modal verbs were sometimes not followed by the infinitive. Some candidates did not distinguish between the use of chi and che and treated them as interchangeable.

The correct use of the definite article continues to appear to be haphazard. Candidates often ignore the use of gli with masculine words beginning with an impure s and replace it with i. Some candidates simply ignore adjectival endings completely. There were some weaker candidates who continue to find the use of the verb piacere a problem.

Some candidates are also vague in their use of verbs taking a preposition or conversely taking no preposition. Some candidates seem unaware that decidere is followed by di, whereas aiutare takes a.

Despite this, many candidates were happy to show just how competent their knowledge of Italian was, with examples of the use of benché and nonostante readily followed by the subjunctive

The range of lexis was good or even very good, but structures were very often limited and repetitive, with a large number of candidates not attempting any subordinate clauses. In the few case of scripted material, structures were often too complex for the candidates' ability and resulted in very flawed performances with marked differences between Parts A and B.

Accuracy about agreements, gender and often verbs endings is still a problem even with stronger candidates and errors in word stress and pronunciation remain frequent.

Common errors were:

- 'pagare l'attenzione' instead of fare attenzione
- 'le rate del crimine' instead of i tassi di criminalità
- 'olio' instead of petrolio
- 'i vegetali' instead of le verdure
- 'involgere' instead of coinvolgere
- 'compostata' instead of composta

Teacher Examiners (TEs)

The exams were generally well conducted: the majority of TEs and their candidates did extremely well. It was evident that a good number of TEs had conscientiously prepared their candidates' topics eliciting very good performances from their candidates. However, there are still some TEs who are obviously not aware of the exam specifications and conduct the examination incorrectly; some who tend to keep the conversation within the level of factual knowledge rather than encouraging the expression of opinions and discussion; and some who limit the number of questions in part B to 4.

Administration

There were fewer problems this year with the timing: in some cases the examinations were either too short or too long, but the most recurrent problem was the insufficient time given to Part A. In a minority of cases, it was obvious that the stimulus-related questions had been known to the candidates before they were asked by the TEs, and even this part took the form of a regurgitation of pre-learnt material.

Another recurrent problem was the rephrasing and/or expansion of the stimulus-related questions. This is regrettable, as it ultimately has an adverse effect on the candidates, and it must be reiterated that, in the interest of fairness and comparability, candidates will be penalised if the examinations do not take place according to the specifications. It is therefore imperative that centres ensure that TEs are familiar with the prescriptions which govern the conduct of the oral examination.

Finally, some centres did not include the oral form or the register and some did not use the correct stimulus.

Quality of recording was generally good but there were still isolated cases where exams were inaudible or the equipment used to record them was old/worn out/poorly packaged. Centres must ensure that recording equipment is in good order so that the recordings made are of good quality and can be marked.

Advice and guidance

Detailed advice and guidance can be derived from comments made throughout the report. In particular:

- candidates should choose a general topic area which reflects their personal interest
- the material should not only involve factual knowledge but also include opinion
- candidates should be prepared to give full and extended answers to the stimulus-related questions
- candidates should plan and prepare, not memorise, the discussion in Part B.

Teacher examiners should:

- use the correct stimulus
- ask the 4 stimulus-related questions as they appear on the card, without re-phrasing or expanding them
- elicit opinions and not test for factual knowledge only
- ensure that sufficient time is devoted to Part A
- move away from the topic of Part A to more general discussion of the topic area
- ask genuine unpredictable questions related to the chosen topic
- give a hesitant candidate the chance to respond but don't correct or interrupt
