SECTION A: TRANSLATION

1 Aşağıdaki metni Türkçe'ye çevirin.

According to a new survey approximately half of the people in Turkey think that climate crisis is the most important issue for the future. Most participants believed that green areas must be protected in the face of global warming. Furthermore, they object to cutting down trees for the sake of economic development. Many stated that electricity generation from oil, gas or coal must be stopped and international agreements must be abided by. Some also said that carbon dioxide emissions caused by transportation must be the focus of action. When the answers were analysed, it was seen that nearly everyone was in agreement that damage to the environment is the result of human activities.
