2.

Donna is 23 years of age. Four months ago she gave birth to Olivia. Initially, Donna appeared to be coping well with the baby. However, two months ago the health visitor, Jane, felt that Donna was becoming isolated. She complained of feeling tired all the time, did not want to go out anywhere and could not be bothered to do anything around the house. Jane thought that Donna was suffering from post-natal depression. Jane referred Donna to the GP who in turn decided to refer Donna for some Cognitive Therapy.

(a) Cognitive Therapy works on the principle that our thinking is organised into schemas and emotional problems are the result of dysfunctional beliefs.

(c) Following this initial assessment Dan has confirmed that Donna is showing some of the symptoms of depression. Cognitive therapists often use a technique of giving their clients 'homework' to do in between sessions. Dan decides to give Donna homework and asks her to make up a list of the things she will attempt to do each day and tick them off when she has completed them.

Explain why homework is seen as an important part of the cognitive approach.
