Francis Bacon has been a very influential character to my A level. His work in deforming the face has inspired me to create this effect. Bacon is a British figurative painter. His artwork is known as bold, austere, homoerotic and often violent or nightmarish. Obviously his work is mainly paintings and therefore his method of disfiguring the face would be completely different to my own. I use photoshop tools to achieve this effect, e.g. Blur/smudge/dodge and filter, liquify. His work shows almost cubist imagery as it shows the figure from all angles creating a much more in depth image. This is hopefully what I aim to achieve with my photographs.

In this piece I have used string to create shapes and deformations in the face. The contrast between light and dark I find brings out these shapes, especially as the string outlines them. This photograph applies to the "rule of thirds" as the hair on the right side of the photograph takes up a third and then the cheek takes up the middle third and finally the jaw moves diagonally across the corner creating the last third with an empty space; this adds to the reception of the image to the human eye, as it is more pleasing and satisfying. I also feel that the radical diagonal lines across the face really draws attention to the shape of the nose/mouth/eye and eyebrow. The texture of the hair also complements the smoothness of the skin which I feel adds dramatic impact to the image. Finally when I finished editing this image I chose to add an "Unsharp Mask" to sharpen the image. I felt that this emphasized the different sections in the face and gave the image much more depth. This is definitely a shocking image, usually taking a while to realize what the context actually is.

It looks as if someone is tired up and is trying to pull away from his bonds, indenting his face causing him to cringe with pain. To achieve this effect I had a strong light in one hand and moved it around his face, while I took photographs in constant succession, allowing me to have a selection of photographs at the end with multiple viewpoints and direction of light.

Artists

- Hadouken! - That Girl That Boy
- Music Video - Bob Harlow
- Skindred - Vern 'Pressure'
- Music Video - Marci Friesland
- The Crips - Mirror Kissers
- Virgil Widrich - Copyshop
- Helen Chadwick
- Kurt Schwitters

Ideas

- Similar to Hadouken! Video: a drummer playing with different viewpoints, colour of background changes progressively
- Moving instruments playing by themselves, music notes and colours appear with each sound.

Effects

- Ripping/creasing the image
- Changing the saturation
- Use of colour in certain places
- Adjusting the lightness/darkness contrast
- Foreshortening and elongation

Techniques

- Involves using a photocopier
- The same photos used repeatedly and sequentially changed with different effects as it progresses
- A variety of stills taken from a film, photocopied and manipulated.
- Stills cut out and placed in a sequence then filmed used the stop motion technique

301-0045 - I don't like this image because I feel that there is a subject in the photograph.

301-0052 - I do not like this image because I don't like how the foreground is slipping out of focus.

301-0060 - I like the image because I like the small depth of field used over the old church that has been built on the beach.

301-0067 - I do not like this image because it is too light and no contrast has set some result.

Black and white photograph - Fog ocean.

In this photograph fog ocean has used the reflection from the sea to make the image and also fit the 'emerging' theme, with both the water and the reflection.

card test print - 100 magenta, 8 second exposure time

I took this image from a very interesting angle I think this is a very big component with this image and that the subject abilities and character are portrayed well within the image so I have selected this image for my final essay.

This image really captures the subject's character and gives it a nice personality as well as the subject being well complemented by its surroundings. I have selected this image to be part of my final essay.

This image complements the subject well and close cropping helps the eye be drawn to the main focal point (the eye of the subject). I have selected this image for my final essay.

This is one of my favorite images. It uses the rule of thirds well and the line created by the plant draws any wandering eyes back to the subject. I have selected this image for my final essay.

Nick Garbutt the photographer who has managed to capture the personality of the habitat that it lives in.

In this image the subject has been positioned as the main focal point of the image as to the rule of thirds too much if the person viewing the image creating a distraction centralizing the subject enough of the frame visual hierarchy correct. Another plus image is it creates a great line which would point back the subject. Garbutt has captured character of the subject by taking the image the subject a noble character as if it is very possible that Garbutt has raised the right colours.
