Research Theme – Emerging Markets

In your research on emerging markets you should consider:

- the opportunities and threats to businesses provided by these markets
- strategies adopted by businesses involved in these markets to exploit the opportunities or to reduce the threats
- factors that might influence business success and failure in these markets
- the ethical and cultural issues involved in operating in these markets including the impact on stakeholders
- the experience of businesses selling to, producing in or buying from these markets
- issues facing businesses entering these markets for the first time
- general economic and demographic trends in these markets in relation to business performance.

You are strongly recommended to study two emerging markets, such as Brazil, Russia, India or China, as this will help you to compare and contrast different countries. Questions will relate to general issues involved in emerging markets and will not refer to one specific country.

You should make reference to your research in your responses to Section A in the examination.

Sony is concerned about the recession and slow future growth rates in the United States, Europe and Japan. It has announced a growth strategy that focuses on emerging markets.

Sony's objective, at the moment, is to increase its annual sales in the BRIC economies (Brazil, Russia, India and China) to 2000 billion yen by 2010. It aims to achieve continued fast growth in these and new emerging markets in the long term.

EITHER

- 1 With reference to the item on Sony and your own research, to what extent do you think that a business strategy of targeting emerging markets is a good one? (40 marks)

OR

- 2 With reference to the item on Sony and your own research, to what extent do you think that low levels of income per person are likely to be the main barrier to businesses achieving their objectives in emerging markets? (40 marks)
