Nestlé

Nestlé employs almost 7 000 people across 23 sites in the UK and Ireland. It makes some of the UK's most popular brands, such as Nescafé, Kit Kat, Carnation, Shredded Wheat, Buxton Water, Ski and Bakers Dog Food. It is estimated that around 95% of households in the UK consume Nestlé products.

Nestlé have several business functions within its organisation, such as Marketing, Human Resource Management, Finance, Sales and Customer Service. Lorraine is the Product Group manager for Cereals in the UK. Her work includes liaising with Sainsbury's, Tesco, Safeway and Waitrose to encourage the sale of Nestlé products in the different stores. In a recent interview Lorraine stated, "It is a close organisation and I think everyone works very closely together. It's a very flat organisation and we are all very motivated, little bit competitive maybe".

Management at Nestlé don't talk about benefits – they talk about rewards. Employees are rewarded for their contribution to the success of the company. Lorraine's democratic style of leadership encourages everyone within her department to work as a team. The company offers a competitive salary, contributory pension scheme and a range of other incentives to choose from, such as childcare vouchers.

Nestlé operates in a highly competitive industry and in the current economic climate has been impacted significantly. This is reflected in their recent cash flow statement as shown below:

Steve Wozniak and Steve Jobs co-founded Apple in 1976. They created a global company which has changed the way people work and play, to such an extent that the technology has improved communications at all levels. For example, staff can use iPhones and iPads to communicate via telephone, e-mail and the Internet. Steve Jobs died on 6th October 2011 and left a great organisation. Mr Jobs had a reputation of being an outspoken and demanding authoritarian leader. He took niche technologies – such as the mouse and graphical user interface, using onscreen icons rather than text – and made them popular with the general public.

A career with Apple is one where you are part of a team. To be a manager within Apple requires someone with innovative and creative thinking. It suits someone who thinks strategically and can be an excellent coach, partner and friend to their staff. Employees can also take part in their 24 month Store Leader Programme. They would get a variety of training experiences and be given leadership opportunities. They would come out of the programme with excellent world-class leadership skills. Potential employees submit a Curriculum Vitae (CV) to Apple. Then Apple will contact all successful candidates based on their skills, knowledge and expertise. Employees of Apple benefit from fringe benefits, including discounts for employees and another financial incentive such as share ownership.
