Evidence A – Reggae Reggae Sauce

For years Levi Roots made his hot Reggae Reggae Sauce from his kitchen in Brixton with the help of his seven children. Levi became a local fixture at Brixton market in London, selling his sauce out of a rucksack. The overwhelming popularity of the sauce among Brixton's large Caribbean community made Levi and his sauce a local celebrity.

However, it was in 1991 at the Notting Hill Carnival when Levi really recognised the potential the sauce had to make him a fortune. His Notting Hill Carnival stall was called the Rasta'raunt because it was more than a food experience.

Through Reggae Reggae Sauce, Levi believed he could combine his two great passions, creating a fusion between the food he was cooking and the music he was singing. Business was going to get much better because in January 2007 Levi Roots appeared on the BBC show Dragons' Den.

Levi recalls... "I was broke. In my pocket was twenty quid; all I had to my name. That morning I called to order the mini cab, asked the controller about the fare, he told me twelve quid to the Dragons' Den in London Bridge."

The idea of Dragons' Den is to pitch, barter and sell your business or invention to five multi-millionaires. If you can convince them that you are someone who can give a return for their investment, you will get their venture capital.

Levi Roots persuaded TV entrepreneurs to invest £50,000 in his sauce-making business. His Reggae Reggae Sauce is now on sale in over 600 Sainsbury's stores. Levi said events since appearing on the show had been "amazing and life changing. The deal with Sainsbury's is a dream come true for me and my family, and seeing the sauce on the supermarket shelves was an emotional but enjoyable moment."

Dragons' Den venture capitalists Peter Jones and Richard Farleigh each paid Brixton-based Levi Roots £25,000 in return for a 20% stake in his company. Peter Jones said: "Levi is a great guy and he's created a great product which he is passionate about.... I am sure his deal with Sainsbury's will be the first of many fantastic milestones on the way to business success and making his dreams a reality."

Sainsbury's buyer Nick Paddison said the chain had been hugely impressed with the product. "It fits perfectly with our ethos to encourage customers to try something new and our desire to help nurture smaller, niche suppliers, so we have pulled out all the stops to make it available in stores as quickly as possible," he said.
