GIVe to offer 'affordable luxury'.

George Davies, the founder of clothing retailer Next and also known for the 'George' clothing range at Asda and Per Una at Marks and Spencer, is launching a new retail venture called GIVe. The name GIVe evolves from the initial G of George, the Roman numeral IV, in recognition that this is his fourth clothing label, and the plans to use profits for charitable purposes.

Davies believes he has identified a gap in the market. The gap is the difference between the high-priced branded labels such as Dolce and Gabbana, Armani and Versace and lower-priced fashion retailers such as Top Shop and Primark.

Davies, who is investing £20 million of his own money in the project, uses the term 'affordable luxury' to describe what he is offering. Shoppers visiting the store will see a limited range of clothes which will aim to reflect the latest fashion trends, but at the same time be more suitable for everyday wear. The prices will be higher than at other high street fashion retailers but the in-store service will be greater.

10

Davies plans to add value by having style experts and tailors available in-store. He is deliberately targeting a market segment that is female, over 30, with an income of around £40,000 per annum and with a social conscience.

15

The attention to detail, the identification of market needs which are not being met, the emphasis on quality of products rather than price (although the market is highly competitive) are key elements of the marketing mix. Mr Davies is confident his new venture will work and has said that he will be disappointed if annual sales do not reach £50–60 million.
