- 9 Read the passage below in the translation which you have studied and answer the questions which follow.

The translation of W.F. Jackson Knight

- I was startled out of my sleep, and climbing to the highest point of the roof stood listening keenly. It was like fire catching a cornfield when wild winds are blowing, or like the sweep of a mountain torrent in flood, flattening smiling crops for which oxen had toiled, and bringing whole forests down, while some shepherd standing high on a crag of 5 rock hears the roar in helpless wonder. There was no doubt now as to the truth; it was at once clear how the Greeks had outwitted us. Already the fire had vanquished the broad mansion owned by Deiphobus, and down it crashed.

Virgil, Aeneid, Book 2, page 60

The translation of D. West

- I shook the sleep from me and climbed to the top of the highest gable of the roof, and stood there with my ears pricked up like a shepherd when a furious south wind is carrying fire into a field of grain, or a mountain river whirls along in spate, flattening all the fields, the growing crops and all the labour of oxen, carrying great trees headlong
5 down in its floods while the shepherd stands stupefied on the top of the rock, listening to the sound without knowing what it is. Then in that moment I knew the truth. The treacherous scheming of the Greeks was there to see. Soon the great house of Deiphobus yielded to the flames and fell in ruins.

Virgil, Aeneid, Book 2, page 39

OR

- 10 Read the passage below in the translation which you have studied and answer the questions which follow.

The translation of W.F. Jackson Knight

- 5 Suddenly a remarkable and imposing sight came to view. On the green river-bank was a shining-white sow with her white litter of the same colour as herself, which had lain down on the ground in a wood. Aeneas the True brought implements, and stationed both sow and litter at an altar. And he sacrificed all to Juno, to Juno only, to Juno herself, the Supreme. Then did Tiber make smooth his heaving flood for the whole length of that night and withdrew the flow of his now voiceless waves, becoming so still as he levelled the ripples on his surface that it seemed like a kindly pool or peaceful marsh, on which no oar need strain.

Virgil, Aeneid, Book 8, page 203

The translation of D. West

- 5 Now suddenly before his astonished eyes there appeared a portent. There through the trees he caught sight of a white sow with offspring of the same colour, lying on the green shore. This sow devout Aeneas offered to you as a sacrifice, even to you, O greatest Juno, leading her to your altar with all her young. And all that long night the Thybris calmed his flood, reversing his current, and was as still and silent as a peaceful lake or quiet marsh. There were no ripples on the surface of his waters, and no toiling for the oar.

Virgil, Aeneid, Book 8, page 191

- (a) How had the 'imposing sight' (Jackson Knight) / 'portent' (West) been interpreted by Tiber (Thybris)? Give two details. (2 marks)
- (b) Which two men do Aeneas and his men go on to meet after this passage? (2 marks)
