Source B: Res Gestae Divi Augusti 8

In my fifth consulship, I increased the number of patricians by order of the people and the Senate. I reviewed the roll of the Senate three times, and in my sixth consulship, with Marcus Agrippa as consular colleague, I made a census of the people. I carried out a lustrum, after a gap of forty one years, in which were counted 4,063,000 Roman citizens. Then, again, with consular imperium, I carried out a lustrum alone, in the consulship of Gaius Censorinus and Gaius Asinius, at which were counted 4,233,000 Roman citizens. And, thirdly, with consular imperium, I carried out a lustrum, with Tiberius Caesar, my son and colleague, in the consulship of Sextus Pompeius and Sextus Apuleius, at which 4,937,000 Roman citizens were counted. By new laws passed on my authority, I brought back many examples of ancestral practices that were becoming obsolete in our time and I myself handed on many exemplary practices to posterity that could be imitated.
