GUIDANCE

Time management

This paper is divided into two sections.

You are advised to spend about 50 minutes planning and answering your chosen question in Section A.

You should allow yourself ample time to read and assimilate the material in Section B before you attempt to answer any of the questions.

It is recommended that you spend about 50 minutes reading the material and preparing your answers for Section B, allowing yourself 50 minutes in total to answer both questions.

Synoptic expectations and opportunities

Both sections of this paper are synoptic; that is, they test your ability to make connections between a theoretical understanding of theatrical processes and practices, acquired throughout the course, and their realisation in performance.

In Section B, you are required to make explicit, relevant reference to your own experience of drama and theatre acquired through your AS and/or A Level courses.

SECTION A

Answer one question from this section.

You are advised to spend about 50 minutes planning and answering your chosen question.

If you choose Question 4, you must answer on Brook, Grotowski or Brecht.

SECTION B

Read the following material which is taken from David Edgar's adaptation of Charles Dickens' novel Nicholas Nickleby. The series of short scenes from the play is prefaced by a list of the characters who appear in the extract.

Once you have read the material carefully, you should answer Question 5 and one further question, chosen from Questions 6 to 8.

It is recommended that you spend about 50 minutes reading the material and preparing your answers, allowing yourself 50 minutes in total to answer both questions.

When answering the questions, you should adopt the perspective of director, actor or designer as specified in the question. You should also refer explicitly to relevant wider experience of drama and theatre in order to support and illustrate your answers.

The Material

Dickens published his novel, Nicholas Nickleby, in 1839, but David Edgar's adaptation was specially created for and by members of the Royal Shakespeare Company, working as an ensemble, and was first performed in 1980.

The opening of the play introduces the audience to some important characters in the story; to Nicholas Nickleby, the 'hero' of the story, to his loving mother and sister and to his, not so loving, Uncle Ralph. We are shown the first meeting of Nicholas with his uncle and we are shown his first meeting with the unpleasant Mr Squeers who owns the grim boarding school named 'Dotheboys Hall' (and who appears to be a most unfit person to be in charge of children).

At the end of the sequence of scenes, we see Nicholas board the coach that will take him from London to Yorkshire a long way from his family to earn his living as an assistant to Mr Squeers.

The playwright, David Edgar, specified that everybody in the cast should take part in the narrative sequence that opens the play and that the actors in the ensemble, when "not playing a named part, would, when not changing or preparing for an entrance, sit or stand round, on the set, watching their story unfold".
