General Marking Guidance

- All candidates must receive the same treatment. Examiners must mark the first candidate in exactly the same way as they mark the last.
- Mark schemes should be applied positively. Candidates must be rewarded for what they have shown they can do rather than penalised for omissions.
- Examiners should mark according to the mark scheme not according to their perception of where the grade boundaries may lie.
- There is no ceiling on achievement. All marks on the mark scheme should be used appropriately.
- All the marks on the mark scheme are designed to be awarded. Examiners should always award full marks if deserved, i.e. if the answer matches the mark scheme. Examiners should also be prepared to award zero marks if the candidate's response is not worthy of credit according to the mark scheme.
- Where some judgement is required, mark schemes will provide the principles by which marks will be awarded and exemplification may be limited.
- When examiners are in doubt regarding the application of the mark scheme to a candidate's response, the team leader must be consulted.
- Crossed out work should be marked UNLESS the candidate has replaced it with an alternative response.

Section A: Post-2000 Poetry

Question Number 1	Indicative Content
	Effects All reasonable and relevant interpretations of 'regret' should be rewarded. A pertinent choice of second poem might be Inheritance by Eavan Boland. Students may include the following in their answers: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• both poems recognise a past for which the speakers are grateful but, in effect, the speaker, with self-lacerating vehemence, regrets his neglect and disdain of his mother and in Inheritance the speaker feels she has not lived up to the traditions of the past in her own motherhood: the mother's raw hands from preparing food in Effects suggest a debt that has not been repaid; the mother cannot pass on the skills of a past generation to her own daughters in Inheritance</li> <li>• the long sentences, sometimes unfinished, in Effects reflecting regretful thoughts of the past; the stanza divisions in Inheritance</li> <li>• the use of rhyme to hold the ideas together and reinforce regret especially in the concluding triplet in Effects; enjambment in both poems, but especially in Inheritance where there is no rhyme</li> <li>• the shift in mood in both poems: Effects ends with the poignant little bag of effects and regret; Inheritance ends on a positive note with a recognition that the speaker had skills after all</li> <li>• imagery in both poems is both literal and figurative, creating vivid pictures that reinforce the regret; the image of the hand at the beginning of Effects is reintroduced at the end and picks up some symbolic meaning; similarly the language in Inheritance becomes metaphorical – 'the island of waters', 'the secrets of health and air'</li> <li>• the first person speaker in both poems, expressing feelings of regret.</li> </ul>

Question Number 2	Indicative Content
	Please Hold All reasonable and relevant interpretations of 'people coping with difficulties' should be rewarded. A pertinent choice of second poem might be An Easy Passage by Julia Copus. Students may include the following in their answers: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• both poems deal with a difficult situation: an older person trying to cope with modern technology in Please Hold and the girl making her way into her family's house without a key in An Easy Passage</li> <li>• the irony of both titles: Please Hold becomes an annoying mantra; An Easy Passage involves a fear of heights and falling</li> <li>• contrasts: the frustration of the speaker in Please Hold, in contrast to the smooth talking of the robotic machine, produces some sardonic comedy; the observer in An Easy Passage sees painted toenails and a graceful drop in contrast to the trickiness of the manoeuvres described earlier</li> <li>• the language in Please Hold is concrete and realistic with little that can be called figurative or 'imagery' in the traditional sense of similes, metaphors etc.; in An Easy Passage we have 'the long, grey eye of the street' and 'the warm flank of the house' to aid the description of the girls' escapade</li> <li>• the rhythms of both poems: the rhythmic repetition of Please Hold with three or four metric feet to a line, and the irregular iambic pentameter of An Easy Passage: particular lines might be indicated to show their effect</li> <li>• the broader themes: Please Hold uses the robotic answering service as a model for a changing, and unhelpful, world in which the speaker is growing old. An Easy Passage reflects on the way 'the world admits us less and less/the more we grow'.</li> </ul>

It is possible some candidates may consider characters other than Ellis as undergoing transformation</li><li data-bbox="488 763 1230 936">• the effect of being removed from familiar surroundings makes Ellis meet new people and learn from them: her roommate on the liner, her fellow lodgers, her colleagues at work, for example</li><li data-bbox="488 943 1230 1182">• the effect of living and working in a sophisticated city contrasted with living in a small country town like Enniscorthy; Ellis gaining qualifications as a bookkeeper and gaining in status; coming back to Enniscorthy with American-style clothes and looking different</li><li data-bbox="488 1189 1230 1294">• the major events that change Ellis's life: meeting Tony, the death of Rose, her relationship with Jim</li><li data-bbox="488 1301 1230 1429">• the novel shows the influence of the environment: how society determines or changes the individual's perceptions and attitudes</li><li data-bbox="488 1435 1230 1615">• Ellis's increased awareness of different nationalities: her introduction to Tony's Italian family, her Jewish lecturer, selling Red Fox stockings to black women at Bartocci's, encountering racial prejudice.</li></ul>

Question Number 10	Indicative Content
	Brooklyn Students may include the following in their answers: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Tony's entry into the novel is a successful dramatic device and comes at a point where change is taking place: 'coloured people' are going to be welcomed into Bartocci's store; Father Flood organises dances in the parish hall to include other communities; Eilis has overcome her homesickness and has started bookkeeping lessons</li> <li>• things change for Eilis with the death of Rose and there is an immediate tension between the pull of home and her feelings for Tony in Brooklyn, which represents new beginnings</li> <li>• Tony takes Eilis to meet his family and Eilis has insight into the lives of immigrant families and the changes they are undergoing and introducing: this is a new way of looking at family life; this is another side to Brooklyn, as up to now Eilis has seen only the Irish community</li> <li>• the relationship with Tony represents sexual freedom for Eilis and for the reader there is a new romantic interest in the novel</li> <li>• the context of immigration, change and new directions: Eilis is meeting people of a nationality she has not encountered before and sees how they are making their mark in a new country with plans to build houses and make a future for her and Tony</li> <li>• choices confronting women in the 1950s: Tony might be said to represent the future that Eilis has opted for; her family and Jim back in Enniscorthy represent what she has decided to move away from. It might be argued, however, that Tony represents yet another entrapment – her impulsive commitment to marriage is a 'new beginning' she is not yet ready for, and may regret having made. The novel's success lies in the ambivalent feelings aroused by the ending.</li> </ul>
