CRITERIA FOR MARKING

Introduction

The AQA's revised Government and Politics specification has been designed to be objectives-led in that questions are set which address the assessment objectives published in the specification. The assessment objectives for A Level and AS are the same, the weightings are different. Details of the weightings are given in paragraphs 7.2 and 8.4 of the specification.

The schemes of marking reflect these objectives. The mark scheme which follows is of the levels of response type showing that candidates are expected to demonstrate their mastery of the skills required in the context of their knowledge and understanding of Government and Politics. Mark schemes provide the necessary framework for examiners but they cannot cover all eventualities. Candidates should be given credit for partially complete answers. Where appropriate, candidates should be given credit for referring to recent and contemporary developments in Government and Politics.

Consistency of marking is of the essence in all public examinations. It is therefore of vital importance that assistant examiners apply the marking scheme as directed by the Principal Examiner in order to facilitate comparability with the marking of other options.

Before scrutinising and applying the detail of the specific mark scheme which follows, assistant examiners are required to familiarise themselves with the general principals of the mark scheme as contained in the Assessment Matrix.

Using a levels of response mark scheme

Good examining is about the consistent application of judgement. Mark schemes provide a framework within which examiners exercise their judgement. This is especially so in subjects like Government and Politics which in part rely upon analysis, evaluation, argument and explanation. With this in mind, examiners should use the Assessment Matrix alongside the detailed mark scheme for each question. The Assessment Matrix provides a framework ensuring a consistent, generic source from which the detailed mark schemes are derived. This supporting framework ensures a consistent approach within which candidates' responses are marked according to the level of demand and context of each question.

One of the main difficulties confronting examiners is what precise mark should be given within a level. In making a decision about a specific mark to award, it is vitally important to think first of the mid-range within the level, where that level covers more than two marks. Comparison with other candidates' responses to the same question might then suggest that such an award would be unduly generous or severe.

In making decisions away from the middle of the level, examiners should ask themselves questions relating to candidate attainment, including the quality of language. The more positive the answers, the higher should be the mark awarded. We want to avoid "bunching" of marks. Levels mark schemes can produce regression to the mean, which should be avoided. A candidate's script should be considered by asking "Is it:-

precise in its use of factual information?
appropriately detailed?
factually accurate?
appropriately balanced or markedly better in some areas than others?
generally coherent in expression and cogent in development (as appropriate to the level awarded)?
well presented as to general quality of language?"

The overall aim is to mark positively, giving credit for what candidates know, understand and can do.

ASSESSMENT MATRIX

| | Knowledge and Understanding | Skills | Communication |
|---------|---|---|--|
| | AO1 | AO2 | AO3 |
| Level 4 | Candidates demonstrate a comprehensive knowledge of political institutions and processes and the relationship between them, producing answers which fully address the requirements of the question and demonstrate excellent contextual awareness. They produce answers which include detailed and comprehensive interpretations or explanations, and provide accurate evidence and up to date examples to substantiate and illustrate points made. | Candidates confidently apply a wide range of well developed concepts and theories, using appropriate political vocabulary, to analyse and synthesise political information and to construct cogent and coherent arguments and explanations. Candidates provide analyses which display a sophisticated awareness of differing viewpoints and a clear recognition of issues. Parallels and connections are identified together with well developed comparisons. There is a clear and full evaluation of political institutions, processes, behaviour, arguments and explanations. | Candidates communicate arguments, explanations and conclusions with clarity and produce answers with a clear sense of direction culminating in a conclusion which flows from the discussion. |
| Level 3 | Candidates demonstrate sound knowledge of political institutions and processes and the relationships between them, producing answers with a clear attempt at addressing the requirements of the question and demonstrating sound contextual awareness. They produce answers which include developed and effective interpretations or explanations and provide clear evidence backed up by good examples to illustrate points made. | Candidates apply a range of developed concepts and theories, using political vocabulary to analyse and synthesise political information and to construct clear arguments and explanations. Candidates provide analyses which display an awareness of differing viewpoints and recognition of issues. There is a clear recognition of parallels and connections together with some comparisons. There is good evaluation of political institutions, processes, behaviour, arguments and explanations. | Candidates communicate arguments, explanations and conclusions well and produce answers with a conclusion clearly linked to the preceding discussion. |

| | Knowledge and Understanding | Skills | Communication |
|---------|--|--|--|
| | AO1 | AO2 | AO3 |
| Level 2 | Candidates demonstrate an outline knowledge of political institutions and processes and some awareness of the relationships between them, producing answers with a limited attempt at addressing the requirements of the question. They may demonstrate contextual awareness covering part of the question. They produce answers which include a partial but reasonably effective attempt at interpretation or explanation, with some not very detailed examples to illustrate points. | Candidates use a limited range of concepts and theories to consider political information and begin to construct arguments and explanations. Candidates offer limited analysis which shows some awareness of differing viewpoints. There is a recognition of basic parallels and connections together with limited comparisons. There is a simple attempt to evaluate political institutions, processes, behaviour, arguments or explanations. | Candidates communicate arguments and conclusions adequately with straightforward narrative and/or explanation. A conclusion may be offered but its relationship to the preceding discussion may be modest or implicit. |
| Level 1 | Candidates demonstrate a slight and incomplete knowledge of political institutions and processes and limited awareness of the relationships between them, with very limited attempt to address the requirements of the question. Only superficial awareness of the content of the question with little interpretation and few examples often inaccurately reported or inappropriately used. | Discussions are supported by few if any concepts and theories. Arguments and explanations are sparse and incomplete. Analysis shows little awareness of differing viewpoints and very few parallels and connections will be used to establish comparisons. Evaluations of political institutions, processes, behaviour, arguments or explanations will be superficial and naive. | Answers rely upon narrative which is not fully coherent and conclusions are not adequately related to the preceding discussion. |

Examples and evidence from the recent US elections are used in order to substantiate points made. | The failure of Perot in 92 to win any electoral college votes after spending $60 million may be introduced to show that money does not always buy "success". It is up to candidates to recognise the numerous factors and argue a strong case. | 1(c) (cont'd) | Candidates demonstrate an outline knowledge of one or two factors influencing "success" or the lack of it in US elections. They may accept the main thrust of the question, agreeing that it is money alone that determines success. They produce answers which show only a limited attempt at addressing the requirements of the question. There may be some attempt at interpretation with some examples given. | Candidates use a limited range of concepts and theories to consider the many factors used to explain electoral success or the lack of it in the USA, and only begin to construct arguments and explanations for these. They offer limited analysis but show some awareness of some of the varying factors involved. There is a simple attempt to evaluate arguments and explanations but with very little evidence and few examples to substantiate points made. "Success" may be perceived in quite simplistic terms. | Candidates communicate arguments and conclusions adequately with straightforward narrative and/or explanation. A conclusion may be offered but its relationship to the preceding discussion may be modest or implicit. |
| | Level 1 (1-2 marks) Candidates display some slight and incomplete knowledge of factors influencing electoral success in the USA, producing answers with only a limited attempt at addressing the requirements of the question. There is only superficial awareness of the context of the question with little interpretation or explanation, and few if any examples given. | Level 1 (1-2 marks) Candidates' discussion of factors influencing electoral success in the USA is not adequately supported by the use of theories and concepts. Few arguments and explanations are constructed, and there are few parallels, connections and comparisons are made. Evaluation of explanations for the differences is superficial and naïve with no evidence or examples presented to back up any explanation. | Level 1 (1 mark) Answers rely on narrative which is not fully coherent. Conclusions are frequently not adequately related to the preceding discussion. |

| (cont'd) | (5-8 marks) Candidates demonstrate an outline knowledge of the importance and role of political parties in American politics with a more limited attempt at addressing the requirements of the question and the answer may be more descriptive of the parties and their views. They may demonstrate some contextual awareness covering part of the question such as a focus on similarities OR differences. They produce answers which include a partial but reasonably effective attempt at interpretation or explanation with some not very detailed examples about parties to illustrate the points being made. | (5-8 marks) Candidates use a limited range of concepts and theories to explain the role of parties in American politics, and only begin to construct arguments and offer explanations for their similarities and differences. They may accept the thrust of the quotation without any challenge. They offer only a limited analysis showing some awareness only of viewpoint surrounding their role and characteristics. There is a simple attempt to evaluate the arguments about the role and nature of US parties within the political system, with limited evidence and examples to illustrate points made. | (3-4 marks) Candidates communicate arguments and conclusions adequately with straightforward narrative and/or explanation. A conclusion may be offered but its relationship to the preceding discussion may be modest or implicit. |
| | Level 1 (1-4 marks) Candidates demonstrate slight and incomplete knowledge of the role of political parties in American politics and answers show only a limited attempt to address the requirements of the question. There is only a superficial awareness of the role played by parties with little interpretation or explanation and few, if any, examples being offered to illustrate points made. | Level 1 (1-4 marks) Candidates' discussion of the role and characteristics of political parties in American politics is not adequately supported by the use of political concepts and theories. Arguments and explanations are not fully constructed and there is little awareness of differing viewpoints on their role. Evaluation of explanations of their similarities and differences is superficial and naïve. | Level 1 (1-2 marks) Answers rely on narrative which is not fully coherent. Conclusions are frequently not adequately related to the preceding discussion. |

| Question 3 (40 marks) | Level 4 (13-16 marks) Candidates demonstrate a comprehensive knowledge and understanding of the role and nature of PACs in American politics and the controversial nature of their activities. They recognise that there are strong arguments on both sides of the "help" or "hinder" debate and are able to present evidence for both. The role of PACs in both raising election finance and their involvement in interest group activity is understood as is their role relating to supporting (or opposing) | AO2 Level 4 (13-16 marks) Candidates apply a comprehensive range of well developed political concepts and theories relating to the activities of PACs in US democracy. These are used to construct clear arguments both in favour of and against the activities that they perform within the electoral and political systems. The arguments in their favour would relate to first amendment rights, raising money for political candidates, supporting or opposing candidates or | |
| | their role relating to | candidates, supporting or | |
| | | congressional legislation. They are also criticised for leading to the dominance of "single issue politics" in the USA. Links could also be made with the "incumbency factor" in US politics, the weakening of parties and the dominance of money. | |

| Question 3 (cont'd) | AO1 Level 2 (5-8 marks) Candidates demonstrate an outline knowledge of the role played by PACs in the US political system with a more limited attempt at addressing the requirements of the question. They may demonstrate contextual awareness covering only a part of the question, such as a description of the activities of PACs only and a failure to link them to interest groups and parties. They produce answers which include a partial but reasonably effective attempt at interpretation or explanation, with not very detailed examples or evidence to illustrate points made. They may only present one side of the argument and fail to address | Level 2 (5-8 marks) Candidates use a limited range of concepts and theories to consider the arguments for and against the activities carried out by PACs in the USA. Candidates offer a limited analysis which shows some awareness of differing viewpoints and reasons for them. There is a simple attempt to evaluate arguments and explanations, and some limited evidence used to illustrate these. | Level 2 (3-4 marks) Candidates communicate arguments and conclusions adequately with straightforward narrative and/or explanation. A conclusion may be offered but its relationship to the preceding discussion may be modest or implicit. |
| | the "help" or "hinder" part of the question. Level 1 (1-4 marks) Candidates demonstrate slight and incomplete knowledge of the role and activities of PACs and the debate concerning these. Answers show only a limited attempt to address the requirements of the question. There is only a superficial awareness of the context of the question, with little interpretation or explanation and few examples if any are given. | Level 1 (1-4 marks) Candidates discussion of the arguments surrounding the activities of PACs is not adequately supported by the use of concepts. Arguments and explanations are not fully constructed. Analysis does not show awareness of different viewpoints, and few parallels or connections are made to establish comparison. Evaluation is superficial and naïve, with little or no evidence presented. | Level 1 (1-2 marks) Answers rely on narrative which is not fully coherent. Conclusions are frequently not adequately related to the preceding discussion. |

| Question 4 (cont'd) | Level 2 (5-8 marks) Candidates demonstrate an outline knowledge of split ticket voting in American elections, with a limited attempt to address the requirements of the question. They may demonstrate contextual awareness covering part of the question. They produce answers which include a partial but reasonably effective attempt at interpretation or explanation, with some not very detailed evidence and examples of split ticket voting to illustrate points made. | Candidates use a limited range of concepts and theories to consider reasons for the existence and significance of split ticket voting by American voters. They begin to construct some arguments and explanations, but offer limited analysis showing awareness of different viewpoints. There is a simple attempt to evaluate arguments and explanations, and some limited evidence to illustrate these. | Candidates communicate arguments and conclusions adequately with straightforward narrative and/or explanation. A conclusion may be offered but its relationship to the preceding discussion may be modest or implicit. |
| | Level 1 (1-4 marks) Candidates demonstrate slight and incomplete knowledge of split ticket voting in American elections, and answers show a limited attempt to address the requirements of the question. There is only superficial knowledge of the context of the question with little interpretation or explanation. Little evidence and few examples if any, are introduced into the answer. | Level 1 (1-4 marks) Candidates' discussion of the explanations for the existence of split ticket voting and its consequences is not adequately supported by the use of concepts. Arguments and explanations are not fully constructed, and there is little analysis showing awareness of different viewpoints. Evaluation is superficial, and there is little or no evidence of examples presented in the answer. | Level 1 (1-2 marks) Answers rely on narrative which is not fully coherent.
