GCE Health & Social Care (6940) Unit 3 – Positive Care Environments

Edexcel and BTEC Qualifications

Edexcel and BTEC qualifications come from Pearson, the world's leading learning company. We provide a wide range of qualifications including academic, vocational, occupational and specific programmes for employers. For further information visit our qualifications websites at www.edexcel.com or www.btec.co.uk for our BTEC qualifications.

Alternatively, you can get in touch with us using the details on our contact us page at www.edexcel.com/contactus.

If you have any subject specific questions about this specification that require the help of a subject specialist, you can speak directly to the subject team at Pearson. Their contact details can be found on this link: www.edexcel.com/teachingservices.

You can also use our online Ask the Expert service at www.edexcel.com/ask. You will need an Edexcel username and password to access this service.

General Comments

On the whole, administration was generally good this series although it is disappointing to note that moderators continue to see the incorrect addition of marks and incorrect completion of OPTEMs by centres. As has been mentioned in previous series, these errors may affect the overall grade learners receive and therefore centres are advised to check carefully before submitting work.

Assessment Objective 1

Learners are asked to consider the rights of the individual when accessing care and how the Care Value Base could support those rights. Learners should focus on basic rights such as the right to freedom of choice and the right to information about their own health which should then be linked to aspects of the Care Value Base implemented by service providers and carers that would help support those rights; so the Care Values of Acknowledging Individual Beliefs and Promoting Effective Communication should be discussed.

There remains a significant number of learners who to do not appear to understand that the Care Value Base is a support mechanism implemented to support the rights of the individual. As in previous series, learners continue to focus on legislation for this Assessment objective with the Human Rights Act 1998 featuring strongly despite several previous reports highlighting that this is not required at this point. However, where learners did discuss the Human Rights Act 1998 it was pleasing to see that there was more relevant application with learners discussing aspects of the legislation that were applicable to their chosen service user group and aspects such as prohibition of slavery were seen far less frequently. Nevertheless, reference to the legislation in AO1 demonstrates a lack of understanding of the requirements of the assessment criterion and a limited ability to apply relevant knowledge. Centres need to draw learners' attention to the requirement to pick out relevant information when collating their portfolios.

The Quality of Written Communication appeared to have been assessed accurately in the majority of portfolios sampled.

Assessment Objective 2

Requires learners to identify, explain and discuss a range of barriers to accessing care services and the possible effects those barriers may have on the creation of a positive care environment. It was pleasing to see that this had been assessed more accurately this series and learners were able to describe in more detail the possible effects of the barriers on service users; barriers were more clearly linked to the specific service users under discussion. Once again, there was limited reference to the effect on the creation of a positive care environment seen although in portfolios accessing the higher mark bands this had been discussed quite well with reference to methods to overcome the barriers suggested. Centres should note that it is important that where methods to overcome barriers are discussed, the information is applied to the creation of a positive care environment.

Assessment Objective 3

Learners are asked to demonstrate research and analytical skills evidenced through discussion of how the development and implementation of internal policies and practice within care settings can help promote a positive care environment. As in previous series, marks were lost mainly in the learners' ability to analyse how Service Providers implement and develop those policies with development of policies not being addressed at all. There was little evidence seen on how the policies help to create a positive care environment. Learners continue to discuss a very wide range of policies and procedures and again, I would like to see a more focussed consideration of no more than three or four policies and/or procedures and consider these in detail rather than describing several very superficially. Using the Staff Training and Development policy as an example, implementation might be described by considering the range of statutory training required within the service provision under discussion. This might include induction, Manual Handling and Fire Safety as examples. Learners could also discuss the identification of relevant training opportunities through the appraisal system implemented by the service provider. Development of the policy could be considered through a description of how the service provider evaluates the effectiveness of any training undertaken to decide whether to run this training again. Similar analysis should be made of other policies and procedures within the setting. As in previous series, the sources of information used tended to be limited, referencing was limited and few learners included comprehensive bibliographies demonstrating weak research skills.

Assessment Objective 4

This requires learners to demonstrate evaluative skills by considering how well current legislation safeguards and promotes the rights of service users. It was pleasing to see that some learners had discussed the new Equality Act 2010 rather than the now out-dated discrimination legislation.

Many learners appear confused as to what is required by this assessment objective with some aspects being missed by most learners. There are three elements to the assessment objective: learners are expected to choose no more than three relevant pieces of legislation and discuss the service provider's responsibilities under that legislation, in other words, they should consider what the legislation requires the service provider to do. As an example, one requirement of the Data Protection Act is that all data must be kept secure. Learners are also required to evaluate the effectiveness of legislation promoting the rights of service users. Demonstration of evaluation skills continues to present problems for learners with a large percentage providing no evidence of an ability to evaluate. Despite these omissions, as in previous series the average mark awarded for this assessment objective remains towards the top end of mark band 2 demonstrating a misunderstanding of the requirements on the part of the assessors. Learners should be encouraged to consider the strengths and weaknesses of the legislation under discussion in terms of how it supports and promotes the rights of the service user and then draw valid conclusions. Evaluation of the Data Protection Act might include a discussion on the benefits for the individual in knowing that their personal information will not be shared with any unauthorised individual; however a weakness is that there is general confusion over who data may legally be shared with leading to poor communication between agencies. The third requirement of the assessment objective, the consideration of methods of redress available to service users, was covered well by some learners but there remains a significant number who discussed methods of redress which are not relevant to this task such as Industrial Tribunals and the role of Trade Unions. Learners must focus on methods of redress available to service users not employees.
