OCR (Oxford, Cambridge and RSA Examinations) is a unitary awarding body, established by the University of Cambridge Local Examinations Syndicate and the RSA Examinations Board in January 1998. OCR provides a full range of GCSE, A level, GNVQ, Key Skills and other qualifications for schools and colleges in the United Kingdom, including those previously provided by MEG and OCEAC. It is also responsible for developing new syllabuses to meet national requirements and the needs of students and teachers.

This mark scheme is published as an aid to teachers and students, to indicate the requirements of the examination. It shows the basis on which marks were awarded by Examiners. It does not indicate the details of the discussions which took place at an Examiners' meeting before marking commenced.

All Examiners are instructed that alternative correct answers and unexpected approaches in candidates' scripts must be given marks that fairly reflect the relevant knowledge and skills demonstrated.

Mark schemes should be read in conjunction with the published question papers and the Report on the Examination.

OCR will not enter into any discussion or correspondence in connection with this mark scheme.

3	(b)	Level 3: 12-15 marks Candidates make detailed and well argued judgements showing clear links between the hazards, the service users and/or care workers and ways of reducing the risks. They indicate some consideration of precautions that are already in place. Note: 4-5 stages covered. Level 2: 6-11 marks Candidates identify risks and make sound links between the service users (and possibly care workers) and the risks. They make more detailed recommendations for risk reduction, but may not compare present precautions with actual requirements. Note: 3 stages covered. Level 1: 0-5 marks Candidates identify hazards but make few links between the service users and the specific risks. Advice on reducing risk is simplistic. The work may consist of a simple list of hazards with very basic suggestions for improvement. Note: 1-2 stages covered. Knowledge requirements: small number of fire extinguishers large number of outside doors / security storage facilities / security/ safety steps – in and out bedrooms / privacy kitchen / access/ safety Other features not visible on the diagram but reasonable suggestions should be accepted. F910: Promoting Quality Care

General Comments:

Overall candidates performed well in this paper and there was a good range of marks. Candidates found the more structured format of the paper beneficial and there was less unnecessary 'waffle'.

Some candidates were not referring enough to the content of the new specification, for example the new Care Values and Barriers.

Candidates also lost marks by not reading the questions carefully enough and therefore missing out on valuable marks of subject areas they clearly knew.

The quality of written communication was poor in some scripts. It must be stressed that this is an AS GCE paper and candidates need to be equipped with the appropriate language skills

Some centres entered candidates too early as they were unprepared and did not possess the subject specific terminology or knowledge required to tackle the paper.

Comments on Individual Questions:

Question No. 1ai Well answered – some candidates lost marks by not referring to the scenario in Text 1 Well answered 1a ii 1b i A concerning number of candidates did not know this 1 b ii Some candidates did not understand what was meant by 'areas' and listed types. 1 b iii Many candidates lost marks by putting in the Equal Opportunities Commission not the Commission for Racial Equality Well answered but some candidates did not relate the examples to ethnic 1 c minorities or the links were unexplained, for example 'having no money' 2 a and b Well answered 2 c Candidates lost marks by relating all the benefits to James of attending a training session. Answers needed to be more fully explained.

- Many candidates answered this very well and scored full marks. However some candidates used the old care values or did not give examples of how care workers could actually apply the care values in their day- to- day work.
- Poorly answered, especially for 'Becky'. Candidates wrote that she would' loose her job' or were too vague and said Becky would be 'upset' or would have to tell 'someone'. They need to be more specific and accurate about her professional duties/emotions.
- Well answered except 'breaking the law' was not accepted. It has to be breaking a 'serious' law.
- Candidates found the benefits to service users easier to answer than to service providers. Too much repetition and judgemental statements, for example, 'all bullying will stop'
- 3 d Few candidates could actually name the legislation.

The content was answered well by many candidates with good technical language. Candidates found it harder to discuss the benefits to the children and wrote responses like 'It would make them feel safer' – this was not accepted.

- 4ai Well answered
- 4aii Candidates lost many marks as they did not read the question properly. It asked for how the agencies teach discriminatory attitudes but many candidates wrote the opposite how they teach non discriminatory attitudes.
- 4b Many candidates lost 5 straightforward marks as they had no knowledge of this. It is a new area of the specification and is listed in the WYNTL section.
- 4c Well answered. Candidates lost marks for repetition, for example, Questionnaires, interviews and surveys all counted as one response.
- Very few candidates knew what Social Exclusion meant. Many candidates thought it meant being 'left out' from social activities. This is an important term to explore with candidates.
- Well answered on the whole but some of the ways to facilitate access were unrealistic and therefore awarded no marks.
- 5c Very well answered a popular question with many candidates gaining full marks.
- Candidates found it difficult to outline the content of the act and wanted to just evaluate it. They need to have a clear idea about what it covers, where it applies, what it makes illegal and the commission it set up.
- On the whole this was well answered but it was fairly centre dependent. Candidates are developing their extended writing schools. They should be discouraged from bullet pointing their answers but to aim for more of an essay style format. Many candidates did not score over 10 Marks as they did not give an overall conclusion.

F913: Health & Safety in Care Settings

General Comments:

Entries represented a broad range of abilities and/or achievements, and therefore produced a reasonable range of marks despite the small number of entries.

The ability to carry out a risk assessment based on a plan of a care setting was surprisingly weak by many candidates. It is strongly recommended that centres provide many opportunities for candidates to practise this skill in preparation for the assessment. The most obvious weakness was the lack of links being made between the specific service users and the clearly identified risks.

Most legislation was correctly identified, although few candidates were able to give key facts in sufficient detail (e.g. in relation to RIDDOR)

Some confusion was apparent between standard precautions (which might be carried out anywhere, even a home setting), and special precautions, such as the wearing of protective equipment, which would be found only in a specialised setting.

The Health and Safety Law poster was generally not known, with the majority of candidates offering common sense, but largely incorrect, guesses at the answers.

Comments on Individual Questions:

Question No.

- 1 Generally answered adequately, with most errors or omissions in parts (b) (ii) and (c)
- 2 Generally very well known, with the majority of candidates scoring highly.

The use of the word 'germ' was not considered acceptable at AS level to indicate an infectious agent e.g. bacterium.

3 (b) Knowledge of the five stages of risk assessment was either good or weak, with candidates generally scoring either 5 marks or 1. It is basic knowledge which should be learnt.

A number of candidates described how to go about the process of risk assessment without actually attempting it. The main weakness of those attempting the risk analysis was a failure to link the (easily identified) hazards with the service users in the residential home. Purely generic answers limited candidates' achievements to the lower mark bands.

A number of candidates confused the answers to sections (a) and (b) by failing to differentiate between reducing the risk of outbreak of fire and the prevention of spread of fire to allow evacuation time.

In section (d), successful candidates made clear links between the special needs of the service users and routine evacuation procedures. Some candidates identified the difficulties of those in the setting chosen quite clearly, but then did not say how these might have an impact on evacuation procedures.

5 The key facts about RIDDOR were not well known generally.

Candidates frequently gave poorly-defined answers about preparation for using a hoist. General principles such as the wearing of flat shoes and suitable clothing were not considered to be sufficiently specific to the situation to merit marks at AS level.

Section (a) was generally adequately answered although few candidates achieved the top marks available.

Section (b) was attempted to a reasonable standard by virtually all candidates. Many answers were very generic and therefore failed to meet the criteria for the higher mark bands. Equally some candidates wrote only from a service user's perspective, thereby failing to address the entire question.

Principal Moderator's Report:

General Comments:

Overall the standard of work submitted was encouraging and there was obvious correlation with unit specifications and assessment objectives. Candidates appeared to have grasped the basic structure of a unit and were able to present their evidence in a logical and coherent way. Candidates were able to describe concepts generically but performed less well at applying their understanding. There was a tendency to include all research material, in particular internet research, which should be avoided in the future. There was some evidence that candidates had not been made aware of the amplification set out in the specification and as a result their work had omissions, errors or lacked detail. For future reference it is imperative that every use is made of the amplification as well as the unit recording sheet and assessment evidence grid.

Most Centres were co-operative and sent their work promptly when requested. Centres with 10 or fewer candidates entered, sent all their work once the Moderator was known to them.

Many Centres annotated work clearly throughout the portfolio(s) and on the Unit Recording Sheet (UBS). When this was done, it was supportive to the candidate and the moderation process as it showed how the Centre had applied the assessment criteria. In cases where the criteria had not been met, the Moderator could see how "the judgements had been made" and could highlight specific aspects within the report to the Centre.

The majority of Centres had remembered to send the Centre Authentication Sheet along with their sample. This aided the moderation process enormously as it saved a letter being sent to the Centre requesting this sheet before moderation could begin. It should be noted that one form is required for each Unit entered, a reminder of the need for this form is sent with the request for sample. It is those centres entering less than 10 candidates that need to remember to include this form.

F911 Communication in Care Settings

Candidates were able to describe the four different types of communication used in care settings. Heavy use was made of textbooks and candidates do need to be careful that they write work up in their own words. When selecting the four communication skills used by care workers in the care setting, candidates must ensure they select four from those listed on page 13 of the specification. Some candidates tackled assessment objective two generically instead of applying it to a care setting and were unable to address how service users are valued and supported by the appropriate use of communication skills. Assessment objective two also requires candidates to demonstrate an understanding of the care values and explain their application in a care setting. Candidates should be encouraged to reference any research they have undertaken within the body of the text for assessment objective three. Often candidates were able to describe theories in isolation but were unable to show a level of understanding of theorist's views of the effects of communication on service users.

Candidates must refer to the amplification for assessment objective four in order to include sufficient detail in their write up of their interaction. Again, application of the care values during the interaction was poorly documented and insufficient evidence presented. For candidates to reach the middle mark band and beyond they must evaluate the interaction from their own and the service users/ care workers perspective.

F912 Promoting Good Health

Centres interpretation of assessment objective one varied and whilst this is acceptable for the 2006 sessions, it is important to note that for future reference the term 'from two perspectives', should be interpreted as that of the service user and service provider. For assessment objective two, candidates need to identify' two key workers who are involved in promoting health', which clearly does not cover all key workers. Selection of an incorrect key worker, made it difficult for a candidate to identify and describe two preventative measures which they could apply in their work. Candidates provided evidence of both primary and secondary research for assessment objective three however it is worth noting that the factors that affect health and well being should be from different bullet points on page 27 of the specification. When providing evidence for the Health Promotion Campaign for assessment objective four, candidates must use the amplification which clearly identifies all the evidence required in order to address each mark band. Candidates must also ensure that they include records of observation of the health promotion campaign.

F914 Caring for People with Additional Needs

There was some confusion between causes of additional need and effects for assessment objective one. The different causes of additional need are listed on page 44 of the specification and a candidate should identify a disability from three of the seven causes listed. Once an additional need has been identified and described, the candidate should then go on to explain the effects the additional need has on the service user. For assessment objective two, candidates must ensure that they select one service provider that meets the physical needs of the service user and one service provider that meets the emotional or social needs of the service user. Careful consideration needs to be given to the types of research required for different mark bands for assessment objective three. In order to access mark bands two and three primary research must be carried out as well as secondary research. Evidence submitted for assessment objective four was generally of a good standard however some candidates lacked detail when evaluating the impact of a range of methods of support, aids and equipment used by the service user.

F915 Working in Early Years Care and Education

This unit was tackled well by the majority of centres, with candidates following the assessment objective criteria. Assessment objective three should have research sources referenced within the main body of the script. When considering factors which can affect learning and development, candidates should use page 60 of the specification to ensure they incorporate two factors from each of the three main groups.

F916 Health as a Lifestyle Choice

Many candidates focused heavily on the positive effects of exercise on an individual's physical health at the expense of an individual's mental and social health. Assessment objective two is based on an individual however candidates must first demonstrate a thorough understanding of all the macro and micro nutrients listed on page 72 of the specification. In order for a candidate to be able to suggest improvements and realistic changes to an individuals diet, information would first need to be gathered. This individual may not necessarily be the same individual used for assessment objective three however it would make sense to combine the two. Candidates must be guided by the amplification as to the specific content of the exercise plan and must include an advice sheet on safety factors to be considered. Assessment objective four requires candidates to evaluate both the likely effects of the diet recommendations and the exercise plan.

Report on the Units taken in January 2006

F917 Complementary Theories

This unit was interpreted well by centres and both the specification and amplification were referred to when completing the assessment objectives. It is important that one of the two complementary therapies studied is actually being used by the service user and that the other is appropriate for the service user. A copy of the questions used to assess the suitability of the two complementary therapies, should be included in the portfolio. There should be evidence of sound research practice and skills when collecting information to determine the views of the public

F918: Caring for Older People

General Comments:

Entries covered a range of centres and demonstrated achievement across the full ability range. It was encouraging to see that candidates have developed the ability to apply their knowledge and understanding to a range of different situations.

Candidates demonstrated a good level of understanding of the requirements of the specifications. Many candidates applied their knowledge accurately and with confidence. Candidates used the terminology of the unit appropriately however, some appeared to have difficulty spelling technical vocabulary correctly.

The majority of candidates used their time well and completed the whole paper. A few candidates gave irrelevant answers or simply repeated the same information in a slightly different way. Candidates who scored lower marks failed to respond to the key verb in the question and their answers generally lacked the required level of detail to achieve explain, analyse, discuss and assess.

Candidates demonstrated a sound understanding of the physical effects of ageing on body systems. Social, emotional and economic aspects of ageing were more challenging with a variety of levels of answers being evidenced. Confusion between community care and support services for older service users and professional care workers was apparent. Candidates need to be able to differentiate between these and apply their knowledge in their answers. Care values should be thoroughly covered as it is a requirement of several units, this was not seen in the papers of many of the candidates.

Comments on Individual Questions:

Question No.

- 1 a The majority of candidates were able to identify reasons why an older person may fall down stairs.
- b Candidates related well to the situation and gave clear effects of the fall on Matilda. A few candidates did not apply their answers to the situation and scored low marks. The emphasis of the question was on the way Matilda would be personally affected.
- c This question was answered well by most of the candidates. A few gave services rather than professional care workers. Marks were lost by candidates who did not describe how the care workers would help Matilda.
- d Few candidates accurately stated ways the NHS and Community Care Act would ensure needs were met.
- Well answered by most candidates. A minority did not give answers which applied to social life.
- b A high number of candidates did not seem to understand economic impact of retirement. Some gave social or physical answers

- c Candidates scored well when they applied the information given. Social and emotional answers were the most popular. Some marks were lost because candidates did not explain their answers.
- Some candidates lost marks because they were not specific about their answers. 'Arthritis' alone was not accepted, the type either 'osteo' or 'rheumatoid' were required for the mark. Centres should note that candidates need to know in detail one of the examples for each category of disorders for the physical effects of ageing on body systems.
- b Candidates knew the job role of an occupational therapist either very well or not at all. Many gave answers for a physiotherapist which was incorrect.
- c Understanding of the care values was limited. Candidates did not fully analyse how the occupational therapist would apply them when assessing Shariff's needs. To achieve level two at lease two of the three care values needed to be covered. A high proportion of candidates achieved level one.
- Candidates were able to identify three effects of ageing on Stephen. However, many lost marks because the omitted the required description.
- b Limited understanding of community care services was evidenced. Candidates gave professional care workers which were not appropriate for this question. The quality of explanations varied. Candidates would benefit from practicing answers to this type of question.
- c A high proportion of candidates did not understand the Carers Recognition and Services Act. Many guessed their answers. A minority showed sound knowledge.
- The job role of a community psychiatric nurse was understood by only a few candidates. Some gave generic answers which were applicable and gained marks.
- b A well answered question. Candidates understood and applied their knowledge of the Mental Health Act accurately.
- c Candidates who analysed fully gained excellent marks. Some candidates lost marks because they did not consider both positive and negative aspects of the move to the residential home.
- Candidates demonstrated a sound understanding of the negative impact on Rhys of losing his wife. Those who also considered the positive effects were able to access higher marks.
- b Candidates were able to give a range of service providers who could support Rhys. Many did not give any information about their role and how the service providers would give support. Justification of their choice of service providers was generally limited with skills and qualities rarely mentioned.
