Question 1

Study the following source material and then answer the questions which follow.

Source A Foreign and domestic considerations led Henry to call a halt to theological experiments. He supported, and perhaps even encouraged, a parliamentary bill designed to end differences in religion and to publicise England's doctrinal orthodoxy. This piece of legislation—the Six Articles of 1539—imposed severe punishments on anyone who

5 challenged it. However, overall, Henry's reign witnessed some movement away from Roman Catholic theology. The doctrine of papal supremacy was removed, and severe blows were dealt to the cult of the saints. A new emphasis was placed on the Word of God.

Source B By 1538, the time had come for Henry to lay down a few guidelines. This he did comprehensively in the so-called Six Articles of 1539. This statute was drafted by the king personally and reflects his own priorities. Each article was directed specifically against reformed teaching. Transubstantiation was reaffirmed. The marriage of the 5 clergy was denounced and the vows of chastity upheld. This was a sure sign that it was written by the king.

Source C In 1539, the Act of Six Articles re-affirmed basic Catholic theology to the extent that two Protestant bishops resigned. The Act continued to define official doctrines for the rest of the reign. The pendulum had stopped swinging towards Protestantism, but it now simply stopped. It did not swing back towards Catholicism. Even after Cromwell's fall

5 in 1540, the conservative faction at court could not undermine the progress of Protestantism. Perhaps it was already impossible because any attempt to restore Catholicism might be seen by the king as a challenge to his supremacy.
