1 The emperor Otho has been fighting a civil war with Vitellius for control of the empire. After some of his forces have suffered a crushing defeat, Otho decides that, even though he has many loyal soldiers left, it is time to give up the fight.

Once the Othonians' centre was broken, the whole army fled in disorder to Bedriacum, losing many men on the way because the roads were blocked with the dead. The survivors, their spirits broken, finally pitched camp.
