This means they will only have to pay £35 excess instead of the whole medical bill (1)</li> <li>• The insurance will also pay for cover of extra accommodation and travel expenses (1) because he will not be able to use their original flight tickets as a heart attack takes a time for recovery before the customer is safe to fly back (1).</li> </ul>	(6)

Question Number	Indicative Content
4 (c)  AO4	Level 1 - It is good because they have a procedure so that they should know what to do in an emergency situation. Level 2 - It's good because the procedure is that the rep should give someone resuscitation straight away which implies that they have training in first aid so this might mean that they are able to save someone's life. They do not leave the person unattended as they get another person to get help so its reassurance for the person with the medical problem will be dealt with effectively. Level 3 - Having a procedure is good as reps will know exactly what they are required to do in an emergency situation so they will be able to deal with the incident more effectively. The procedure covers lots of eventualities so staff should be able to know what to do in all cases. The only problem is that if it were an emergency then they would not have the procedure in front of them so they will need to be familiar with it. The procedure however is straight forward so therefore easy for reps to remember and apply. If a customer does have an accident or was ill the rep is to give on the spot emergency aid. This is good as they should be trained in first aid and some emergencies are life or death situations and need immediate help. There are some minor expenses available meaning that the customer will be taken care of and the rep is not out of pocket so more likely to really support the customer. The procedure also shows links with medical assistance companies meaning that they can sort insurance cover out on the customer's behalf so they can provide better overall service.

Question Number		Indicative Content
5 (b)	AO4	Level 1 - They withdrew flights so people would be annoyed. Level 2 - Airlines reduced the flights operating out of LHR. By not allowing some flight to depart it meant that they were not putting customers and crews lives in risk of flights leaving without the necessary flight checks. Due to higher security checks there were delays and cancellation of flights meaning there were crowds of people stranded at airports. Level 3 - In terms of safety then BAA acted effectively as the airport increased security measures, which meant that it would be impossible to check all customers in time for their flights to depart. Having some cancellations of flights would result in thorough checks taking place because security staff were required to check passengers at the screening point and the boarding gate therefore more time per customer prior to boarding of the aircraft. Other airports were not affected in the same way so charter flights may not have been as effective because at any airport then increased security would result in some delays this may be due to airports outside of London having less customers and possibly increasing staff to cope with the increased security. At LHR the flights cancelled were transatlantic or European which is a good move as the likelihood of terrorist attacks.
