Document 1aTOURISM IN PORTSMOUTH*Background to the Development of Tourism in Portsmouth

Portsmouth has been the home of the British Royal Navy for over 500 years. However, from its peak in 1945 shipbuilding in Portsmouth gradually declined. The workforce, too, declined. For years Portsmouth relied largely on the Royal Navy for employment, but with a change of emphasis in defence spending from a large conventional surface fleet, the role of Portsmouth as Britain's premier Naval Port was declining and both land and jobs were redundant. 5

Thus, Portsmouth had a problem. The City Council had to take a long hard look at how the jobs could be replaced and how it could create a revitalised economic environment and new opportunities. Portsmouth was not a development area and no help would be forthcoming from government in the form of grant aid. As a densely populated island city, little land was available for further manufacturing or office expansion. 10

The solution was seen to be tourism. The city is rich in natural advantages. Its seaside location and tourism infrastructure, based on the earlier development of Southsea, meant that some basic ingredients of the tourism product were already present. There was also a core of major tourist attractions such as HMS Victory, Southsea Castle and the Royal Naval Museum. It was decided to change the image from 'Sunny Southsea' to 'Portsmouth – Flagship of Maritime England' and to try to encourage the development of new tourist attractions. 15

The Renaissance of Portsmouth Harbour

This £84m landmark project for the city involved a public sector and private sector partnership and received a £38m grant from the National Lottery Millennium Fund. It contained five interconnected elements: 20

1. two waterfront promenades physically linking existing and new attractions and amenities;
2. a harbour tower;
3. expansion and improvement of the Historic Dockyard;
4. development of Priddy's Hard Heritage Area;
5. a waterbus network across the harbour. 25

The aims of the project were:

- to create a world-class leisure and maritime heritage destination;
- to bring new life into historic buildings and increase public access to the waterfront;
- to act as a catalyst to over £300m of investment in the local economy.

An important part of the scheme was to take into account local economic and environmental needs. It also provided a positive alternative use to redundant Ministry of Defence land and buildings, as well as an excellent public and private partnership. Furthermore, the restructuring of the defence industry, associated job losses and disinvestments had had a dramatic effect on the harbour economy and local catchment area. Hence, an important element of the project has been to involve local skills and offer retraining programmes for unemployed people. 30 35

The new attractions developed as part of the Renaissance of Portsmouth Harbour are all now open to visitors.

Attractions include:

- Gunwharf Quays – a £200m world-class shopping and leisure development;
- Action Stations! – a £16m interactive attraction;
- Millennium Promenade – over 6km linking the Historic Dockyard, Priddy's Hard and Gunwharf Quays;
- Explosion! – an exciting Museum of Naval Firepower; 40

- The Timespace – one of the largest vertical sundials in the world;
- Spinnaker Tower. 45

As well as traditional attractions, the scheme provides an ideal platform for visiting Tall Ships and a selection of waterfront events. This renaissance project has added a further dimension to Portsmouth's already varied tourism product.

Marketing and Tourism Team

The specific responsibility of the Marketing and Tourism Team is the marketing of Portsmouth as a destination for visitors of all types – day-trippers, staying visitors (leisure and business), groups and international visitors. 50

The Marketing and Tourism Team's sister section – Visitor Services is specifically responsible for services offered to visitors within the city, i.e. signposting, tourist information, shopping, etc.

The Market 55

Portsmouth is focused on attracting a range of different markets. The resort of Southsea still has a following of long-stay (4+ nights) domestic tourists seeking a traditional seaside holiday, but in more recent years Portsmouth has seen a growth in the day-trip and short-stay markets, with long-stay visitors accounting for a smaller market share. Portsmouth has become increasingly popular with overseas visitors – the main overseas markets are currently Australia, North America, France and Germany. 60

Good distribution systems are a part of successful tourism marketing activity. In terms of physical accessibility, Portsmouth is conveniently located on the south coast. It has good road and rail links to central London, Heathrow and Gatwick airports (as well as local provincial airports); in addition to ferry links to France (Caen, Le Havre, Cherbourg and St Malo), Spain (Bilbao) and the Isle of Wight. 65

The city's tourism literature is produced in English, French, German, Spanish, Dutch and Japanese. It is also available in large print and some publications are available on tape or in Braille.

Information reaches the tourists in a variety of ways:

- exhibitions; 70
- direct mail linked to advertising campaigns;
- national and regional tourist boards and their publications;
- local hotels and attractions;
- National Tourist Information Centre network;
- group travel and conference organisers; 75
- Internet;
- e-marketing.

Portsmouth produces a number of key publications:

- Official Visitor Guide;
- Mini Guide; 80
- Official Group Travel Guide;
- Conference Brochure;
- Accessible Portsmouth – Guide for Visitors with Disabilities.

Within the city, the Visitor Information Centres service enquiries from visitors in person, over the telephone and by email. They offer foreign exchange facilities, accommodation booking, discount admission to attractions and theatre ticket sales, plus other additional services. 85

HMS Victory & The Royal Naval Museum

200 years ago this year, Vice Admiral Lord Nelson, on board his flagship HMS Victory, led 27 British ships into battle off Cape Trafalgar against a much larger combined French and Spanish fleet.

Thanks to Nelson's inspired leadership, the British won a great victory and the Battle of Trafalgar has become a defining moment in our history. But Nelson paid the ultimate price – struck by a single bullet as he paced the quarterdeck with his captain, Thomas Hardy, he survived just long enough to learn the outcome of the battle.

Visit HMS Victory and see the Great Cabin where the battle was planned, the spot where Nelson died and the once crowded decks where over 800 men lived, worked and fought.

See, touch, hear and even smell the history of the Royal Navy at the Royal Naval Museum where you will find the most significant collection of permanent exhibitions in the UK devoted to the Battle and Nelson, including a breath taking, walk through Trafalgar Experience!

Trafalgar Sail
18 March – 30 October 2005
 See the only surviving sail from HMS Victory at the Battle of Trafalgar. Pock marked by some 90 shot holes, the sail pays tribute to the ferocity of the battle.

(Demand for this exhibition is expected to be high and entry will be on a first come, first served basis)
 For much of this bicentenary year, HMS Victory will be open to visitors to explore at their leisure. Guides will be on hand to answer any questions you may have. Guided tours will only be available on certain off peak days but can't be booked in advance - please check dates before you visit!

Mary Rose

Mary Rose was King Henry VIII's favourite warship – fast and successful. Yet she sank on a fine summer day in 1545 as she sailed into action against the French fleet.

See this extraordinary shipwreck, the raising of which was watched by millions on television in 1982 and learn of the ongoing conservation process to preserve her for all time. Also see over 1200 Tudor artefacts recovered from the wreckage.

Harbour Tours

Enjoy a leisurely 45 minute boat cruise around Portsmouth Harbour and see today's modern warships, including aircraft carriers when in port. Your captain will give a lively and entertaining commentary as you cruise aboard one of our comfortable vessels complete with catering and indoor and outdoor seating.

Harbour Tours are subject to availability and weather conditions and operate a reduced service in off-peak periods - please call 023 9272 2562 to check availability. This service will not be available from 23-29 June 2005 and operates under a separate ticket system during special events.

HMS Warrior 1860

Bigger, faster and more heavily armed than any other warship afloat, Warrior was the first iron hulled, armoured battleship. Powered by steam as well as sail, in her heyday she was the most formidable ship the world had ever seen.

Now finely restored to her original condition, you can explore at leisure this great ship's engine and laundry rooms, sit at the mess tables, touch the cannons and imagine what life on board would be like.

did you know? ...
 Portsmouth Historic Dockyard has its own Art Gallery, Artists Harbour Gallery where you will find regular exhibitions, workshops, master classes and more!

Ever wondered what it is like to go into battle with the Royal Marines? To command a warship?

Fly a helicopter? Now you can find out at Action Stations, our interactive showcase of the modern Navy!

Experience life aboard a Type 23 Frigate through the stunning large format movie 'Command Approved' (certificate PG) and then test your skills and reactions on our interactive displays and simulators!
