Sounds Good! is a respected music magazine produced by LWX Ltd and bought by people aged 16–30. It sells through newsagents at a price of £4.

LWX Ltd has identified some key changes in its external environment that have occurred recently.

- After years of rising pay, consumers' incomes have fallen; their pay has risen more slowly than prices. The average magazine buyer has had a 10% fall in income since 2015.
- Younger people are increasingly using online technology. Visits to the magazine's website have risen by 20% each year since 2016; printed magazine sales have fallen by 6% a year.
- Local unemployment rates have risen making it harder for those without jobs to find work.

For several years LWX Ltd has considered producing Sounds Good! online only. It has been decided that from 1 March 2019 the magazine will only be available online. This decision will cause 15 job losses and reduce work for distributors and newsagents. The magazine will be free for readers and funded through advertising.

iHeels is a business that manufactures women's shoes. It is run as a workers' co-operative.

The co-operative treats its employees in distinctive ways.

- Everyone receives the same pay, no matter what job they do. Employees on the production line making the shoes and people who work in the office, as well as those who deliver the shoes to shops receive the same rate of pay.
- Employees are encouraged to do more than one role within the co-operative. Training is provided to help employees take on new roles. Some employees do three or four different roles over a period of time.
- iHeels has a completely flat organisational structure. Everyone is involved in weekly meetings to make important decisions, eg whether to introduce new styles of shoes.

Giles loves working at iHeels. "It's great that we all receive the same pay. I'm paid a good salary. We are not supervised and are trusted to do our jobs. Doing different jobs is really interesting. Everyone at iHeels has very high levels of motivation."

Using a motivational theory of your choice, analyse the reasons for the high levels of employee motivation at iHeels. [9 marks]

Vegan foods only come from plants. Following an increase in the popularity of vegan foods, Paula Martin opened Vegan Place Ltd, a combined restaurant and shop selling vegan foods and a website promoting the business. It grew rapidly, expanding from one outlet to sixteen across the UK, but there were complaints from employees.

Paula has made all the decisions about the restaurants and shops. She decided:

- the restaurants' menus (which were all the same)
- the products sold in the shops
- the format of the 'information events' held to promote vegan lifestyles.

Amir, a restaurant manager, felt ignored. "Paula decides everything and doesn't ask my opinion. I have not spoken to her for years. I spend time talking with my customers and know what they would like us to start selling in the shop."

Other employees were also dissatisfied with its centralised organisational structure. Elise, a chef, said: "I have lots of plans for vegan meals. I'd like to share these with other chefs and hear their ideas."

In October 2018, after more complaints from employees, Paula decided to decentralise the organisational structure of Vegan Place Ltd.

Read Item A and answer Question 1 1

Item A Burnley Fine Cottons Ltd

For many years Lancashire was famous for manufacturing cotton. This changed as cotton manufacturing moved overseas, leading to many factories closing. Despite only making small and declining profits Burnley Fine Cottons Ltd (BFC Ltd) survived. Since 2015 demand for high quality cotton that has been manufactured in England has risen.

BFC Ltd has had a tall organisational structure for many years. Its junior employees have little freedom to make decisions. This has annoyed some staff, leading to complaints that jobs are boring. One commented: "With a little training we could do lots more tasks, organise ourselves and save the company money in the long-run."

Dipak Patel was appointed as chief executive of BFC Ltd in 2018. He intends to take advantage of the recent increase in demand for English cotton, and hopes it will allow the company to become more profitable. Currently it cannot afford to invest in the latest production line technology that would help it to be more efficient and sell at more competitive prices.

Dipak wants:

- to keep BFC Ltd's production costs as low as possible
- employees to produce more cotton each week.

Together these two factors will help to increase sales. Because of this, he plans to make some changes to the organisation:

- Over half of the company's middle managers and some supervisors will be made redundant.
- The organisational structure will become flatter.
- Production-line employees will be empowered and work in teams.
- Teams will have responsibility for different stages of production such as spinning, weaving and dyeing the cotton. They will make decisions on how to use resources efficiently and how to fulfil customers' orders on time.
- Overall, the number of employees will fall by 10%, despite rising sales.

Dipak recognises that these are big changes for the company. "Most employees are not used to empowerment and this will change their jobs significantly. However, many employees have been with us for a long time and I have great faith in them. I'm sure they'll enjoy the increased authority."

However, one director was concerned. "Our financial position is very weak and the redundancies will be costly. Financial constraints can make organisational change difficult, although they can be overcome."

1 1	Considering the information in Item A , evaluate the extent to which Dipak's use of empowerment and the business' financial constraints might affect his ability to implement this organisational change successfully.
