Case Study - Kahn's Kasuals

Hassan Kahn has been running the family clothing business for the last five years as a sole trader, employing eight of his relatives. The firm has managed to attract funding from the regional Government for expansion of the business.

The firm makes some clothes for the domestic market but the recent growth has been in the production of copies of designer label clothing for exporting. The lack of any copyright laws in the country makes this trade very profitable. Hassan is, however, aware that the business environment is changing in the following ways. 5

- the National Government is coming under increasing pressure to introduce tighter copyright legislation. 10
- the growth in the real income of the domestic population is becoming a significant factor for the industry as a whole. 10
- the National Government is proposing to introduce more complex accounting procedures in line with international standards. 15
- it is rumoured that there is the possibility of a revaluation of the national currency in the near future. 15

Hassan has decided to contact his nephew, a product manager with a multinational company, for advice on future business strategy. His nephew has put forward a number of proposals for action.

- the firm appears to be lacking capital, and Hassan should consider establishing a partnership or a limited company. 20
- the accounting system employed by the firm needs to be formalised, employing standard accounting concepts. (Hassan currently produces some figures at the end of each financial year.) 20
- the machinery employed by the firm is becoming obsolete and needs replacing. The replacement machinery should be subject to a depreciation process. 25
- Hassan should consider entering into a licensing agreement with the brand name manufacturers rather than producing the present copies. This would require the purchase of new machinery. 25

Hassan's nephew has provided some financial information, some of which was extracted from Hassan's records, for these proposals and has agreed to meet with Hassan in a month's time.
