Resources Lists

The various items here illustrate something of the great range of resources currently available. Students are expected to read widely and teachers will need to use their professional judgement in assessing the suitability of any item. Please note that the items listed here do not define the syllabus. No item is prescribed or recommended, and the syllabus places no premium on candidates being aware of the latest scholarship or the particular views of specific scholars.

Wherever possible, the most up-to-date details have been included. In order to maximise accessibility, all items are paperbacks and only books currently in print are listed. Websites such as www.amazon.com and www.abebooks.com as well as specialist book dealers can be used to track them down while the British Library Lending Division, accessible via county library services, will lend many works.

Teachers might wish to use/refer students to readily-available periodicals, such as:

The Economist <http://www.economist.com/>
Global Politics <http://www.global-politics.co.uk/>
New Internationalist <http://www.newint.org/>
New Statesman <http://www.newstatesman.com/>
Newsweek <http://www.newsweekeurope.com/>
Political Insight <http://www.politicalinsightmagazine.com/>
The Spectator <http://www.spectator.co.uk/>
Time <http://www.time.com/time/>
Total Politics <http://www.totalpolitics.com/>
The World Today <http://www.chathamhouse.org/publications/twt> and TV and radio coverage, such as:

In addition, teachers might also find helpful the support and resources of The Political Studies Association <http://www.psa.ac.uk/> tutor2u (Politics section) <http://www.tutor2u.net/blog/index.php/politics/>

These lists are not exhaustive and can only be works in progress.

To keep them useful, Cambridge will be pleased to receive suggestions of additional items, notification of errors and information about works out of print.

Thank you.

Cowley P 'The Labour Leadership Contest', podcast of 2007 from University of Nottingham Podcasts

<http://www.nottingham.ac.uk/podcasts/2007/june/thelabourleadershipcontest.aspx>

"Professor Cowley discusses the announcement of Prime Minister Tony Blair's that he will be standing down as leader of the Labour Party and British Prime Minister on 27th June 2007. Professor Cowley discusses the reasons behind Tony Blair's announcement and the pressure he has faced from within his own party. Professor Cowley goes on to discuss why Gordon Brown will succeed Tony Blair uncontested and the potential problems this could present for the new Prime Minister. Finally, Professor Cowley discusses the contest for the deputy leadership, why the candidates are standing and the challenges they will face in winning."

- Shapiro I 'The Moral Foundations of Politics', a course of 24 filmed 50 minute lectures of 2010 from Yale University. The course "explores main answers to the question, "When do governments deserve our allegiance?" It starts with a survey of major political theories of the Enlightenment—Utilitarianism, Marxism, and the social contract tradition—through classical formulations, historical context, and contemporary debates relating to politics today. It then turns to the rejection of Enlightenment political thinking. Lastly, it deals with the nature of, and justifications for, democratic politics, and their relations to Enlightenment and Anti-Enlightenment political thinking. Practical implications of these arguments are covered through discussion of a variety of concrete problems." Shapiro is Sterling Professor of Political Science and Director of the MacMillan Center for International and Area Studies at Yale University <http://oyc.yale.edu/political-science/plsc-118>
- Smith S B 'Introduction to Political Philosophy', a course of 24 filmed 50 minute lectures of 2006 from Yale University. The course offers "an introduction to political philosophy as seen through an examination of some of the major texts and thinkers of the Western political tradition. Three broad themes central to understanding political life are focused upon: the polis experience (Plato, Aristotle), the sovereign state (Machiavelli, Hobbes), constitutional government (Locke), and democracy (Rousseau, Tocqueville). The way in which different political philosophies have given expression to various forms of political institutions and our ways of life are examined throughout the course". DEMOCRACY AND ITS CRITICS

Aldrich R 'Living in an era of global terror', podcast of 2007 from U-Now Open Courseware, University of Nottingham

<http://unow.nottingham.ac.uk/resources/resource.aspx?hid=c7cf55ea-d501-afc3-e3ac-c690660340c0>

"Globalisation has led to a free flow of money, people and ideas, which has benefited many people in the West in recent years and enhanced our standard of living, but the price paid is a reduction in security. As we see a shift towards a de-regulated global economy, with states removing controls over their borders, how does a state maintain its security? This has led to an increase in intelligence led activities and increasing expectations upon them. In addition, Professor Aldrich discusses how mass communication has magnified the influence of terrorists and increased the problems faced by the security services. Finally, Professor Aldrich also discusses the challenges faced by the state in balancing our security, liberty and luxury. Are our civil liberties at risk?"

Khan I 'Why Human Rights matter', Paragon Lecture of the University of Nottingham Human Rights Law Centre, podcast of 2007 from University of Nottingham Podcasts <http://www.nottingham.ac.uk/podcasts/2007/february/whyhumanrightsmatter.aspx>
"The Secretary General of Amnesty International, Irene Khan, spoke about the erosion of human rights in the name of counter-terrorism measures in the UK and across the globe. Irene Khan argued that the UK's counter-terrorism policies are undermining the absolute prohibition of torture and ill treatment. She maintained that this approach is based on a false assumption that effectively fighting terror requires the erosion of human rights when, in fact, only respect for such rights, including fair trials and the absolute ban on torture will create an environment that can properly underpin our security. She concluded by arguing that we all have a role to play in upholding human rights principles in such difficult times."

 'Can there be an end to War?' <http://www.bbc.co.uk/programmes/p00qw9t6> Professor Keegan 'considers the future of war. He argues that it will not be law that will keep the world's peace. Rather it will be because the United Nations retains the will to confront unlawful force with lawful force together with the capacity to resolve the conflicts in which wars originate. He believes that we must not shrink from seeing the causes of war addressed, but equally we must not shrink from seeing violence used when the threat of violence has failed.' 30 minute audio podcast.

Khan I 'Why Human Rights matter', Paragon Lecture of the University of Nottingham Human Rights Law Centre, podcast of 2007 from University of Nottingham Podcasts <http://www.nottingham.ac.uk/podcasts/2007/february/whyhumanrightsmatter.aspx>
"The Secretary General of Amnesty International, Irene Khan, spoke about the erosion of human rights in the name of counter-terrorism measures in the UK and across the globe. Irene Khan argued that the UK's counter-terrorism policies are undermining the absolute prohibition of torture and ill treatment. She maintained that this approach is based on a false assumption that effectively fighting terror requires the erosion of human rights when, in fact, only respect for such rights, including fair trials and the absolute ban on torture will create an environment that can properly underpin our security. She concluded by arguing that we all have a role to play in upholding human rights principles in such difficult times."
