The shadow of a great predecessor could be used to advantage if it is chosen as a trick or as a tactic, that can be discarded once it has brought you power or authority. Napoleon III used the name and legend of his illustrious grand-uncle Napoleon Bonaparte to help him become the first President and then Emperor of France. In Sub-continental politics, Indira Gandhi and Benazir Bhutto used the names and prestige of their fathers to get the position of Prime Minister in India and Pakistan respectively. In Balochistan, sons and off-shoots of many important political social leaders are taking advantage of the names and social or political prestige of their fathers or fore-fathers to claim respectability in Baloch Society.
