6. The following extracts are adapted from:
Learning from Bristol: The report of the public inquiry into children's heart surgery at the Bristol Royal Infirmary 1984–1995.
(The final report was published in 2001.)
You should be aware that these adapted extracts are only part of a detailed and lengthy report.

Introduction:

The inquiry was carried out in response to concerns relating to the mortality rate of children undergoing heart surgery at the hospital.

Extract 1:

The inquiry looked at the management of the care of children receiving complex cardiac surgical services at the Bristol Royal Infirmary between 1984 and 1995 and relevant related issues; the adequacy of the services provided; the action taken both within and outside the hospital to deal with concerns raised about the surgery and to identify any failure to take appropriate action promptly; the conclusions obtained from these events.

Extract 2:

The story of the paediatric cardiac surgical service in Bristol is an account of people who cared greatly about human suffering, and were dedicated and well-motivated. Sadly, some lacked insight and their behaviour did not always follow best practice. Many failed to communicate with each other, and to work together effectively for the interests of their patients. There was a lack of leadership and of teamwork.

Having read extracts 1 and 2, now answer these questions.

- (a) Explain one reason for holding a public inquiry. You should use an example, apart from the one referred to above, which can be from any sector.

Now read Extract 3.

Extract 3: Recommendations from the inquiry at the Bristol Royal Infirmary 1984–1995.

1 Children: When in hospital, children must be cared for in a child-centred environment, by staff trained in caring for children and in facilities appropriate to their needs.

2 Safety: For the future, the NHS must eliminate unsafe practices. It must remove barriers to safe care.

3 The competence of healthcare professionals: For the future, it must be part of all healthcare professionals' contracts with a trust that they undergo appraisal, continuing professional development and revalidation to ensure that they remain competent to do their job.

4 Standards of care: For the future, there must be two developments. Firstly, there must be agreed and published standards of clinical care for healthcare professionals to follow, so that patients and the public know what to expect. Secondly, there must also be standards for hospitals as a whole.

5 Openness: There was enough information from the late 1980s onwards to cause questions about mortality rates to be raised both in Bristol and elsewhere. Little, if any, of this information was available to the parents or to the public. Such information as was given to parents was often partial, confusing and unclear. For the future, there must be openness about clinical performance. Patients should be able to gain access to information about the relative performance of a hospital, or a particular service or consultant unit.

6 Monitoring: For the future, there must be effective systems within hospitals to ensure that clinical performance is monitored.
