(d) All young offenders who spend at least 4 weeks in a young offenders institute have a 'sentence plan' to help them plan for when they are released. It also helps them make the most of their time in custody. The aim is to prepare young offenders as much as possible so that they can continue a law-abiding life after their release.

Identify two initiatives that should be included within the 'sentence plan' and explain how you think they will prepare young offenders for their release.
