Study the following sources and answer the questions in the question paper.

Source A: Unequal Britain

Britain's richest 10% of people have 100 times more wealth than the poorest 10% and the gap is getting wider.

- This may be due to inherited wealth, social contacts or discrimination against certain groups.
- Despite the Equal Pay Act and the work of the Commission for Equality and Human Rights, women's average hourly pay is still 21% less than men's.

(Source: adapted from The Guardian, 27 January 2010)

Source B: Nathan James receives his Pride of Britain 2010 Award

Prince's Trust Young Achiever, Nathan James, who won a Pride of Britain Award in 2010, has turned his life around. He had once been in prison for armed robbery, but has now become a role model to help others.

- He now works on a Just4Youth charity project.
- Nathan has since inspired youths out of the cycle of unemployment and crime.
- The Prince's Trust, established by the Prince of Wales, aims to help young people develop careers and, like the Pride of Britain Awards, celebrates their success when they show great loyalty, talent, skill or bravery.

Source C: China praises much-criticised Burma election

China's one-party government has congratulated the generals in Burma for holding an election. But the UK Prime Minister David Cameron said the election was a sham.

- US President Barack Obama said 'It is unacceptable to steal an election, as the generals in Burma have done again.'
- The generals' party won about 80% of the seats in the election – but restrictions were placed on opposition parties.
- Nobel Peace Prize winner Aung San Suu Kyi (pictured), didn't vote since her own party was not allowed to contest the election.
- She won the country's previous election in 1990 but was never allowed to take power, spending most of the past twenty years in detention.

Source D: Prince William goes to Afghan front line to lay wreath for heroes

- Prince William salutes fallen heroes at a remembrance service in Afghanistan.
- The prince placed a wreath in tribute to 'all who have made the ultimate sacrifice for our country'; giving a whole new meaning to respect and patriotism.
- He is not allowed to fight on the front line in case he puts fellow soldiers in danger.

Source E: The Big Society begins here

The Eden Valley in Cumbria was one of the first 'Big Society Communities' announced by David Cameron. Local MP, Rory Stewart, supports the Big Society ideas of volunteering and setting communities free to do things for themselves. In one weekend alone he:

- met a group of mothers who had built a playground
- met the local volunteers who run the Fellrunner bus service (pictured).

Villagers such as those at Crosby Ravensworth (pictured in front of the pub they hope to save) are now being helped by civil servants to cut through all the rules and regulations so they can run projects such as:

- delivering broadband to local communities
- generating electricity for their community
- recruiting volunteers to keep local museums or libraries open for longer.

Funds in forgotten bank accounts will provide finance for groups and charities carrying out Big Society projects.
