Write your answers to Section A Questions (a)(ii) and (b) here:

sem ~~has~~ shows his relationship with his family in different ways. One is with Atticus, "His voice was like the winter wind." Atticus' voice must be cold. "The winter wind" shows this. ~~If~~ Atticus' voice being like this must mean sem has done something he shouldn't. Lee uses this simile to give the effect of feeling cold to the reader. The reader can imagine the voice of Atticus. sem also shows his relationship with Scout in a different way. sem yanked my hair." The powerful verb, "yanked", shows that Jem pulled Scout's hair in a quick, sharp movement. This shows that Jem may have a bad relationship with Scout if he "yanks" her hair. This powerful verb can give an effect of pain on the reader.

JEM shows when he doesn't want anyone around, including his family. "hunched down in a rocking chair, scowling, waiting." This list of three shows Jem's reaction to what he has done. ~~The list of three includes a powerful verb~~ This shows to his family that he knows he has done something wrong, but doesn't want to be with any one. This gives a negative effect to the reader, but the reader understands what Jem is feeling.

* Another part of the novel where the relationship of the Finch family is Chapter 10, when he shoots the rabid dog, Tim Johnson. ~~At the start of this chapter, Atticus gives advice to Jem, and Scout overheard. point, they seem to be unable to talk. "Atticus was silent." This short sentence shows how Atticus has reacted to the case, and uncomfortable around his children for what he has done. This also makes the reader uncomfortable, as Atticus didn't want his children to know about his past, and the reader understands this.

Atticus has a good relationship with Jem and Scout, but remains silent about some things, which is shown in Jem ~~to~~ and Scout's reactions. "Jem and I nearly fainted." The powerful verb, "fainted", shows that Scout and Jem's reaction is big. They ~~didn't~~ ^{don't} know about Atticus' past. The verb fainted gives a powerful effect to the reader, and they can imagine what Scout and Jem are feeling.

Jem later feels proud of Atticus, as he understands why Atticus didn't tell them about his past. "Atticus is a gentleman, just like me!" This ~~exclamt~~ exclamation shows that Jem is proud and happy for Atticus. This gives a positive effect to the reader, ~~the read~~ The reader also feels the
