TV weekly.

This week on television ~~most~~ the majority of us were glued to the drama of the X factor final. Now under normal conditions I would not choose to write my article about a TV reality show because lets be honest theres better tv on weekend nights, but because it is such a huge event every year and always brings in huge ratings I feel it appropriate.

Now the show got off to its usual start when Dermot O'Leary did his usual "Your Saturday night starts right here which was when I cant help thinking no... no it didn't. The 1st act on were Zulsa's group Kittle Brix. They were very good but it was clear that ~~only one~~ they needed

(Section C continued) one of them to sing lead vocals or they ~~were~~ were ~~just~~ ~~another~~ going to be hopeless. Next on was Marcus Rollin's. He performed very well and although just two songs in it was clear he was a cut above the group. In my opinion he was the clear winner of the two so far. Next on was Kamelia Dilly a very attractive ~~girl~~ teenage girl. She was quite good ~~in~~ her vocals were in tune and her stage presence was good but she lacked flair in her performance whereas the others had it. Under normal x factor circumstances this would be it for the night but as it's the final they would still have to perform ~~the christmas classic~~ a christmas classic. So the show continued. First up was Kittle Brix who performed "Do they know it's Christmas." it was a smart song choice as it was a former charity single, they did it justice but there was still only looking

After their performance there was a short commercial break where after Marcus Rollins was due to perform but due to unforeseen circumstances. Well they ~~say~~ say unforeseen, Marcus was unable to perform so Kamelia Dilly performed her version of "All I want for Christmas is you" in all honesty it was sensational and totally made up for her lack luster 1st performance.

Finally ~~off~~ Marcus Rollins returned and performed "Silent Night" ~~the~~ the atmosphere was tense to see if he could outdo his 1st performance and more importantly outshine Kamelia Dilly's 2nd performance ... and let me tell you ~~the~~ his version was haunting you could have heard a pin drop in 10,000 strong crowd, it was truly sensational.

After the Break it was time for each participant to find out how the public had ~~decided~~ voted.

The tension was high in the crowd as Ciarratt read the 3rd place envelope ... KAMELIA, he yelped, in my opinion

(Section C continued) Kamelia should have placed higher, but it was also quite clear that Larous had been better than Kittle Brix the whole night ~~and~~ and looked to have it all tied up. Cermott opened the winners envelope . . . KITTLE BRIX he screamed . . . I was in shock not only at there victory but how the public had been so stupid. Oh well, lets face it the winner never gets anywhere anyway. Next Week Gary Mills TV sneeze.
