The theme will be released two years in advance to allow time for centres to prepare. Teachers can plan when to deliver this unit, allowing them to introduce relevant examples to the theme when teaching Units 1 and 2. This will support the students' learning of this theme. The early release will allow teachers to collect information from a variety of sources to support their teaching.

The chosen issues will focus on a variety of environments and places, from pristine natural environments to highly-urbanised built environments in countries at all states of development. Each issue will be set at different scales from local/small scale, regional, national and continental to global.

The resource booklet released in January 2010 will contain further information on this theme that candidates can study before the examination.
