The Period Study focuses on an understanding of the unfolding narrative of a time period. In this first GCSE History (9-1) examination most candidates seemed well prepared for the question styles in this examination on British America, 1713-83: Empire and Revolution. Most candidates attempted the required three questions, although it would appear that some candidates answered Section B first. Whilst this is perfectly acceptable it should be noted this has could have implications on timing and unfinished questions, perhaps explaining the number of blank responses for Q2.

Question 1 will always focus on consequence, requiring candidates to explain two valid consequences, giving equal attention to both. Very few candidates failed to attempt Q1 which is deliberately designed to be accessible to the entire ability range; however some provided more detail than was necessary, leaving less time to address higher tariff questions.

Question 2 is a new style of question which focuses on analytical narrative, in which candidates are expected to write an account that not only describes what happened, but also to find connections and make sense of events with an analysis of the links between events as they unfolded. The analytical narrative will always focus on a period containing events or ideas that can be perceived as a sequence; this could cover several years or a much shorter period. Candidates should be clear about the time span of the question to ensure they cover an acceptable range and what it is the narrative is designed to analyse, in this case the relations between colonists and Native Americans. It is clear most candidates found the new style of question challenging. It is vital they understand the narrative concept, with the sense of a beginning, development and end, rather than produce three paragraphs which do not directly link. The quality of responses varied based primarily on depth of knowledge of the topics addressed. These stimulus points serve a different purpose to those on other questions: they will be useful reminders to candidates of signposts along the narrative and not things they need to develop. Candidates do not need to use these stimulus points but there is an expectation that there will be some depth of knowledge, shown by three discrete points in the narrative being covered, although this does not mean candidates need to identify three different events. This question appeared to be the most common answer left blank, perhaps due to timing.

For Q3 candidates were required to analysis the importance of an event/ person/development. The question focuses on what difference the event/person/development made in relation to situations and unfolding developments. For example, in the third choice on this question, candidates are not being asked to comment generally on the importance of the Stamp Act, but to consider its importance for relations between Britain and America. They had to answer two topics out of selection of three. It is clear many candidates had been prepared for the important questions on style. Responses ranged from impressive analysis focused on the appropriate second-order concept (AO2), which were supported with accurate, relevant and good knowledge (AO1), to those from candidates that offered simple comment with limited knowledge for support.

All the Period Study examination questions use a Level of response mark scheme. Progression in AO1 is shown by the candidate's increasing ability to select information precisely and show wide-ranging knowledge and understanding. Progression in AO2 is shown by a candidate's response moving from simple or generalised comments to analytical explanations which show a line of reasoning which is coherent, logical and sustained. Centres are reminded that the indicative content in the mark scheme does not imply what must be included in a response nor does it give any expectation as to how candidates are expected to structure their responses.

Sufficient space is provided in the exam papers for all questions to be answered in full and although some candidates did write on extra sheets they were not always as successful as those who produced more concise answers. It is of vital importance that candidates do not continue answers from one question in the space reserved for another and, if they wish to write more than the booklet allows, they should clearly identify this on the paper and ask for additional sheets.

Question 1

In Q1 candidates were asked to provide two valid consequences of the War of Independence for Native Americans. There are 4 marks available for each consequence, which needs to explain a consequence (AO2) supported with specific information showing good knowledge and understanding (AO1). Most candidates understood the second-order of concept of consequence, although a disappointing number confused Native Americans with colonists and subsequently the relationship between the British and the Native Americans. There was also a tendency by some candidates to give generalisations for a consequence, such as the Native Americans were 'hated by colonists' without any further elaboration. Some candidates merely rephrased the same consequence and as such were only awarded for one of them. A limited number of candidates left the question blank.

Examiner Comment: For consequence 1 the candidate has made a simple comment about a consequence in the form of it left problems over control with generalised information on the topic with reference to the Plains.

For consequence 2 the candidate only makes a simple comment for a consequence with trade deals being broken, but with no supporting knowledge. Therefore the response is high Level 1 for consequence 1 and low Level 1 for consequence 2.

Examiner Tip: Candidates should ensure they provide two different consequences.

Examiner Comment: The candidate has provided two clear consequences, with loss of their land and the tribes splitting, both of which have been explained with reference to specific features of the period such as The Treaty of Paris and the fact some Native Americans fought for the British. The candidate gained full marks for both consequences.

Examiner Tip: Candidates should avoid writing overly detailed responses, taking note of the space provided.

Question 2

This new style of question was not generally approached in an appropriate manner by the candidates who attempted it. The overall structure of demonstrating a beginning, development and end was clearly demonstrated by candidates who attained Level 3. It was clear that candidates had been taught to use language which demonstrated analysis of links, for example 'consequently', 'which resulted in', which was apparent even if they had more limited knowledge. Many candidates wrote several discrete, and often detailed, explanatory paragraphs about separate events, developments, key individuals rather than writing a coherent analysis linking the events and developments to create the unfolding narrative at the focus of the question. The topic of relations between the colonists and Native Americans in the years 1763-64 resulted in a range of responses, with a good number able to establish a sequence. Most candidates were aware of the conditions of the Proclamation Act. The biggest issue was with candidates stating that Pontiac's alliance was a result of the Proclamation Act, as opposed to a causal factor. There were a small number of candidates who talked about King George's Proclamation of 1717. There were a considerable number of candidates who did not attempt this question.

Write a narrative account analysing the relations between the colonists and Native Americans in the years 1763–64.

You may use the following in your answer:

- · Pontiac's alliance with northern tribes
- Proclamation Act, 1763

You must also use information of your own.

The relationship between the colonists and Native Americans in the years 1763-64 were detorior breaking down.

The proclamation act, 1763 stated that the colonists Should not take the Nettive Americans land. However the colonists did not listen and this angered the Native Americans. This shows that the Native American were loyal to the Monarch but not the Darliament.

The pontiac's rebellion was the Native Americans retaliating to the colonists taking their land however British retaliation using Br biological warfare by giving Small pox to the Native Americans really strained the relations between the colonists and Native Americans.

During this At Although some Native American Arribes decided to remain neutral. The relations between the colonists and Native Americans

In the years 1763-64 progressively worsened.

Examiner Comment: The candidate has provided a response which is not in chronological order, placing the Proclamation Act before Pontiac yet they have statements of events with some analysing links so AO2 is a low Level 2. The knowledge used to support is lacking in detail making the AO1 Level 2. Therefore overall this response is placed at mid-Level 2.

Examiner Tip: Candidates need to ensure they have the narrative in the correct order of events.

Write a narrative account analysing the relations between the colonists and Native Americans in the years 1763-64. You may use the following in your answer: Pontiac's alliance with northern tribes Proclamation Act, 1763 - no outling w of You must also use information of your own.

Noviva orraw

Examiner Comment: The response demonstrates a narrative about the conflict showing linking of events, as demonstrated with phrases such as 'in order to do something about this' and 'decided to' resulting in the AO2 being placed in Level 3. The content goes beyond the stimulus points with details regarding the Paxton Boys providing clear knowledge and understanding, meaning AO1 is also in Level 3. Therefore overall the response is awarded a high Level 3.

Examiner Tip: Candidates need to remember this is foremostly a narrative, with a beginning, middle and end, rather than a set of three separate paragraphs. They need to show how one point in the narrative leads to the next.

Question 3

This question comprised two 8 mark questions based on the second order concepts of significance and consequence. Candidates had to explain the importance of two of the following three topics: slavery for the development of plantations; the Enlightenment for cultural development in British America; the Stamp Act (1765) for relations between Britain and America. The question on slavery was the topic most often selected, with the other two equally addressed. Candidates who addressed the importance of the factor raised in relation to development produced Level 3 responses when supported by good knowledge and understanding. This was opposed to candidates who explained the importance of the factor in general terms which normally stayed in Level 2.

In terms of the question on slavery Level 2 responses often provided general knowledge on conditions that slaves endured rather than their impact on the development of plantations or only looked at one aspect of the impact of slavery. Candidates who attained Level 3 recognised multiple implications and were more likely to focus on knowledge and skills the slaves brought with them and the reduction in production costs.

The question on the Enlightenment produced some very good responses at Level 3 with many candidates addressing the importance of education and the role of Benjamin Franklin. The responses which remained in Level 2 often demonstrated knowledge of things such as of the opening of libraries, yet failed to explain how these led to cultural development. One misunderstanding which occurred was when some candidates talked about the Great Awakening rather than the Enlightenment.

The topic of the Stamp Act unfortunately led to some general responses such as it made the colonists unhappy, along with some detail of what the Act entailed. Better responses linked the Stamp Act to the establishment of opposition such as the Sons of Liberty and the issue of taxation without representation. There however was some confusion with candidates referring to the Sugar Act.

Examiner Comment: First response – Stamp Act –The response has no analysis, merely a general statement referring to how it angered the Americans, making the AO2 a low Level 1. There is very limited knowledge demonstrated as failure to understand the tax itself, claiming it was on 'postage of letters', making the AO1 a low Level 1. Overall this is a low Level 1.

Second response - Enlightenment – The response consists of a simple statement, 'anyone could learn anything', making AO2 Level 1. There is general information about libraries and books but it is not specific enough, so AO1 is Level 1. Overall this is a mid-Level 1.

Examiner Tip: Two well developed explanations that also have good knowledge and understanding will enable candidates to attain Level 3. It is vital to have both knowledge and understanding to support answers.

Indicate your FIRST choice on this page.

- The importance of slavery for the development of plantations.
- The importance of the Enlightenment for cultural developments in British America.
- The importance of the Stamp Act (1765) for relations between Britain and America.

Slavery was very important for the development of plantations because the products produced (rice, sugar, tobacco) contributed to a huge part of North America and Britain's revenue.

The slaves who worked on the plantation were not paid for their labour. This was beneficial to the plantation owners as i't meant they could some money t make more profit.

The slaves were also a let and had knowledge of some Crops eg.

The slaves to were also used to the hot climates and were seen as the suitable workers for the plantamon. Their knowledge of Crops helped plantations develop well and their large work force also mean more work would be done in little time.

Slawery was really important for the development of plantation feild fields because without the slawes, the quantity as well as the hanest of crops wouldn't have been in so much abundance, therefore making plantation owners therefore making plantation owners the south).

The successfulness of the use of slawes on plantation as well as the valuable profit made, expanded the plantation farms and led to development of more plantations.

- The importance of slavery for the development of plantations.
- The importance of the Enlightenment for cultural developments in British America.
- The importance of the Stamp Act (1765) for relations between Britain and America.

The stamp act was one of the key events that strained Britam's relationship with America.

The Americalonist distilled the rolea of paying task on goods - especially goods made by them. Croods like paper, newspaper had to be tasked under the New Act.

The colonist sow the act as suppression of their freedom of speech because it taxed items like new spapers. They rebelled against it using arguements such as "no taxatom without representation".

They also put pressure on the stamp collectors who were put in charge

by the British and most of them resigned. The volonists trived to prove to Britain that they wouldn't accept the unfair taxation:

The Stamp Act was significant for the relations between America and Britain

In conclusion, the

relations between America and Britain

Examiner Comment: First response – Slavery –The response shows an attempt at analysis with a line of reasoning. The candidate has raised issues of increased profit and knowledge of crops with a clear focus on plantations which makes the AO2 Level 3. Knowledge included but not fully specific so AO1 is low Level 3. Overall the response is a mid-Level 3.

Second response – Stamp Act – The response provides some explanation regarding suppression of freedom of speech but it is not fully organised and therefore the AO2 is placed in Level 2. There is accurate and relevant information, such as 'no taxation without representation', with places the AO1 in Level 3. Overall the response is a low Level 3.

Examiner Tip: Candidates need to ensure that they explain the importance of events in relation to the focus asked in the question in order to reach Level 3.

Section B of paper 2 assesses the British Depth Study with candidates required to answer three questions targeted at AO1 and AO2. Candidates receive an examination paper with either the two Medieval Depth Studies or the two Tudor Depth Studies. It is the only time in the Edexcel GCSE History examination where candidates need to ensure that they answer questions on the particular option for which they have been entered.

From this summer's scripts there were very few candidates who attempted to answer questions from both Depth Studies, although there were clearly a significant number of candidates that had started answering the questions on the study for which they were not entered before crossing out their work and moving to the section for which they were entered. There were also a number of candidates who had continued their Depth Study responses in the booklet under the option they had not studied, rather than asking for extra paper. Candidates do need to indicate clearly where their response to an item should be found if it is different to the specified section of the answer booklet.

Questions (Q) 4(a) and 5(a) follow an identical format to Q1 on Paper 1. Candidates need to be clear that the feature identified should be a characteristic of the topic and that having identified a feature, they should add a further detail which will explain the feature or provide context. Some candidates did not seem to understand that two marks are available for each feature – one for identifying the feature and one for additional information about the identified feature; answers that listed four features or disconnected points of separate information were limited to a maximum of two marks. There were also a number of answers that tried to use the same point as two separate features.

Q4(b) and Q5(b) follow an identical format to the 12-mark tariff to Q4 on Paper 1 and Q2 on Paper 3, but with a difference in the second-order concept being assessed. On Paper 1 the 12-mark tariff question focuses on the process of at least 100 years, whereas on Papers 2 and 3 it relates to the causes of an event, development, success, failure and so on, over a shorter period of time within a Depth Study. The stimulus points do not normally include dates and are simply intended to help candidates to associate what they have learned with the question being asked. Use of the stimulus points is not compulsory but it should be noted that the mark schemes do require deployment of material not prompted by the stimulus points to reach the top of Levels 2 and 3 and entry into Level 4.

In Q4(c) and Q5(c) candidates choose between (i) and (ii) and the questions may target any of the second-order concepts (cause, consequence, change, continuity, significance, similarity and difference). This question follows the same principles as Q5 and Q6 on Paper 1 but without a requirement for Spelling, Punctuation and Grammar (SPaG) to be assessed. For Q4(c) and Q5(c) the stimulus points in the question will often be useful reminders to candidates of the two sides of the issue or the chronological range covered in the question. Note that they will not necessarily be presented in chronological order. Note also that the stimulus points will usually relate to aspects of content rather than directly indicating a factor that should be included. Candidates do not need to use these stimulus points but there is an expectation that there will be both depth and breadth of knowledge, shown by three discrete aspects of the question being covered.

Many answers remained at Level 3, despite excellent knowledge, because they missed the focus of the question. Candidates who reached Level 4 realised that the topic provides the context but that there is a specific focus on which a judgement should be offered. Similarly, whilst it was pleasing to see how many answers were clearly structured to consider both sides of the issue, sometimes other structures may be more appropriate. Although the question asks how far the candidate agrees, the answer should also take account of the second-order concept being assessed, for example, structuring the answer to look at different aspects of change and continuity or of significance. One reason that many responses remained in Level 3 was that the judgement tended to be simply a summary of the two sides of the issue and the decision that the statement was 'somewhat' true. At Level 4, there should be a sense of evaluation, recognising nuances of partial agreement and showing which evidence carries most weight. Answers should also show what criteria are being applied. For example, a judgement on significance could be based on the number of people affected, the length of time that the effects were felt, the groups affected or how wide-ranging the secondary effects were. Ideally, this will create a sense of argument running throughout the answer and the best answers often had plans, showing that the argument was thought through before the candidates began to write the actual responses.

If extra paper is taken, candidates should clearly signal that the answer is continued elsewhere. However, in many cases where additional paper had been taken, the marks had already been attained within the space provided rather than on the extra paper. Candidates should be discouraged from assuming that lengthy answers will automatically score highly. Indeed, candidates taking extra paper often ran out of time on the final, high mark question and therefore disadvantaged themselves. There were also some completely blank answers to the final question, suggesting that time management was a problem for some candidates.

There were no indications that for Paper 2 as a whole candidates had found it difficult to answer both sections in the one hour and forty-five minutes allowed.

All examination questions use a level of response mark scheme. Progression in AO1 is shown by the candidate's increasing ability to select information precisely and show wide-ranging knowledge and understanding. Progression in AO2 is shown by a candidate's response moving from simple or generalised comments to analytical explanations, which show a line of reasoning that is coherent, logical and sustained. Centres are also reminded that the 'Indicative Content' in the mark scheme does not imply what must be included in a response nor does it give any expectation as to how candidates are expected to structure their responses.

Question 4a

Candidates were asked to describe two features of the Eltham Ordinances. Where candidates attempted this question, they were generally able to answer confidently, achieving Level 2 by identifying a motivation for the Ordinances. An example was cutting costs, and an example of how this was achieved was by providing set mealtimes. Other common responses mentioned banning hunting dogs and reducing the number of palace servants. Many candidates were able to associate the Eltham Ordinances as one of Wolsey's policies, although a number of responses confused the Eltham Ordinances with other features of Henrician policy, most commonly the Amicable Grant or the Break with Rome. A high proportion of candidates left the answer blank.

Question 4b

Candidates were asked to explain the causes of the Pilgrimage of Grace. The majority of candidates were able to expand on the first stimulus point, although significantly fewer were confident in linking enclosure to the Pilgrimage. At Level 2, many responses delivered a detailed explanation of the conditions in the monasteries, with descriptions of monastic vice being a common feature, but often went on to explain how this led to Dissolution without making a link to the Pilgrimage of Grace.

Stronger answers developed from the first stimulus point with specific details of the Valor Ecclesiasticus and linked this back to upsetting people in the north of the country. Common additional information offered by candidates included Cromwell's unpopularity, and unrest stimulated by the religious changes connected to the Break with Rome. However, a large number of responses remained in Level 3 due to over-reliance on the first stimulus point, which prevented candidates from demonstrating wide-ranging knowledge.

The best responses were able to synthesise a range of causes into a coherent line of reasoning. A few candidates showed that the reason for the rebellion varied according to location or class or differentiating between the two waves of revolt.

There were a significant number of responses where candidates wrote about the events or consequences of the Pilgrimage of Grace, rather than focusing on causation, which, while displaying good knowledge of the topic, unfortunately resulted in a loss of marks at AO2. A number of candidates showed chronological confusion by placing the Pilgrimage within the Wolsey era or after the Dissolutions had been completed.

Examiner comment: This response shows good development from the stimulus points. Although there are some inaccuracies, the candidate has remained focused on the conceptual focus of the question. However, since the content of the response is limited to what is prompted by the stimulus, this answer cannot achieve a mark above the middle of Level 3. Therefore, this answer was awarded 8 marks.

Examiner tip: Make sure you include information beyond the stimulus points, or your answer will be capped at 8 marks.

Examiner Comment: This response demonstrates very specific knowledge and covers a range of points, all loosely connected to the theme of religion. Each one is used to explain the growing dissatisfaction that led to the rebellion. This answer scored 12 marks.

Examiner Tip: Good answers can be very succinct and to-the-point, using precisely selected evidence to address the conceptual focus of the question.

Question 4c

Candidates were asked to write about an aspect of the rule of Henry VIII's ministers – either Wolsey's rise Q4(c)(i) or Cromwell's political reforms Q4(c)(ii). A significant majority of candidates opted to answer Q4(c)(i).

Responses to Q4(c)(i) were variable, with an unfortunate number of responses exemplifying Wolsey's rise using events from later in Wolsey's premiership, such as the Amicable Grant or Wolsey's failure to secure an annulment for Henry VIII. It was clear that many candidates had been well-prepared to answer questions on Wolsey's policies and his fall, but that, in some cases, less emphasis had been placed on his rise to power.

Lower-scoring answers often included vague references to Wolsey's background but were rarely able to exemplify Wolsey's organisational skills or make effective use of the stimulus points. A disappointing number of responses assumed that 'expedition to France' referred either to the Field of Cloth of Gold or a fact-finding mission preceding the Treaty of London.

In the mid-range responses, more detailed information was provided about Wolsey's formative years, though the links to his rise to power were usually left implicit and candidates in this range found it difficult to achieve any sort of argument, with conclusions usually being simplistic. Candidates who answered the question well paid clear attention to the question focus and did not go beyond 1515. They elaborated on the Battle of Spurs and campaigns with France in Henry's early reign, often combining this with an explanation of how Wolsey's education and work ethic, combined with Henry's Lack of interest in day-to-day governance, enabled Wolsey to impress the king and achieve more power. Many responses at Level 4 also referenced Henry's unwillingness to work with his father's ministers and Wolsey's parallel rise to prominence in the Church.

Although significantly fewer candidates attempted Q4(c)(ii), responses to this question were generally much stronger. Some impressive knowledge of Cromwell's reforms was demonstrated across Levels 3 and 4 answers, including his reforms to regional government in Wales and an explanation of how the legal aspects of the Break with Rome had an impact on the way England was governed. Some candidates had been taught the historiography surrounding this topic, with occasional references to the alleged revolution in Tudor government of Elton's thesis in the strongest responses. Though beyond what is necessary for this paper, which focuses specifically on AO1 and AO2, it was extremely pleasing to see that this wider aspect of the topic is being covered.

Most candidates were able to build on the stimulus points and include a variety of points from their own knowledge, which helped to ensure that they scored highly on AO1; thus the limiter at Level 3 was often candidates' inability to assess the extent of the consequence of the changes identified. At Level 4, candidates demonstrated an impressive ability to set criteria for making their judgements. The wider impact of parliamentary changes being more important than the narrower impact of the Privy Council reforms was a popular view.

At Level 2, candidates were usually able to expand on the stimulus points with a description of each one or provide evidence of other changes that Cromwell made. A small number of candidates focused on Cromwell's later work with the Dissolution of the Monasteries or the marriage to Anne of Cleves, neither of which was sufficiently well-linked to changes to government to be creditworthy.

Examiner Comment: This response details a range of reasons for Wolsey's rise, including his education, popularity with Henry, and religious connections, as well as developing from the stimulus points.

The content of the answer targets the conceptual focus of the question and there is a conclusion, although the criteria against which the judgement is made are left implicit. Coupled with this, the candidate has not weighed the different causes against one another in the body of the essay, which means this essay lacks strong debate. This response gained 11 marks.

Examiner Tip: Try to express a sense of debate within your essay and, in your conclusion, evaluate the different causes against criteria to make a judgement.

Examiner Comment: This response demonstrates a wide range of content relating to the conceptual focus, analysing each one and comparing it with the factor named in the question.

There is a coherent line of argument leading from the introduction to the conclusion, suggesting that the candidate has planned the response before beginning to write. The judgement is made against criteria – e.g. influence on future government developments. This answer received full marks.

Examiner Tip: Write a short plan for your essay before you begin writing to ensure you have a coherent line of argument running throughout.

Question 5a

Candidates were asked to describe two features of Elizabeth's religious settlement. Where candidates achieved marks in Level 2, usually they identified a relevant piece of legislation and provided some information about it, for example associating the Act of Supremacy with Elizabeth's role as supreme governor of the Church. A number of responses that received marks low in Level 2 did so due to a lack of clarity or irrelevant material: Mary, Queen of Scots and Mary I both featured regularly, as did the grievances of the Puritans, serving as a reminder of the importance of staying focused on the topic.

At Level 1, candidates were able to identify Elizabeth's religion or an aspect of her legislation, for example English Bibles, but had not added further context to this, for example by saying that each parish needed to have one.

Examiner comment: Although the candidate begins with an incorrect statement, the rest of Feature 1 identifies a legal aspect of the Religious Settlement and goes on to add a supporting detail. The second feature has confused the Book of Common Prayer with the English Bible but has enough evidence to be awarded a mark. Therefore, this response gained 3 marks.

Examiner tip: Avoid crossing work out on the short question – instead, see if you can continue adding to it, as you will not lose a mark for a mistake. This will save you time.

Option B4: Early Elizabethan England, 1558-88 If you answer Question 5 put a cross in the box ☑ . Inswer Question 5(a), Question 5(b) and EITHER Question 5(c)(i) OR Question 5(c)(ii). (a) Describe two features of Elizabeth's religious settlement (1559).

Examiner Comment: Although the phrasing is clumsy, and the knowledge is a little vague, this response identifies two features of the Religious Settlement and provides each with a piece of supporting knowledge. Therefore, this response gained 4 marks.

Examiner Tip: Be strict with the time you spend on this question: you do not need much information to achieve full marks.

Question 5b

Candidates were asked to explain the reasons for increased exploration during the Early Elizabethan period. The vast majority of candidates were able to achieve at least Level 1 on this question, with the weakest answers providing brief comment related to the stimulus points, for example, improved journey outcomes thanks to more accurate maps.

At Level 2, candidates frequently described specific examples of aids or the positive examples set by Drake and, latterly, Raleigh. Many candidates emphasised the impact of rivalry with Spain, although at Level 2 this was often not linked explicitly to increased exploration. Other Level 2 answers maintained a good focus on AO2 but were limited by a lack of precise evidence, discussing luxury goods in vague terms, for example.

At Level 3, responses were able to extrapolate from, for example, the successes of Drake and other traders to explain that this motivated more Elizabethans to attempt the journey.

At Level 4, responses combined the motivation provided by other people's successful journeys with the enabling factors of better maps and bigger, safer galleons, to provide a coherent and sustained explanation of the reasons for the increase.

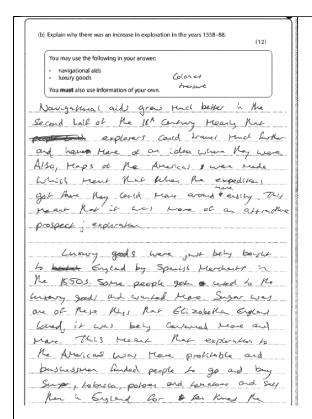

There was an over-reliance from some candidates on content that was only obliquely relevant to the topic, for example, increased poverty in the era. Whilst this may have led to more crew members available for the expeditions, it is not a reason why the number of explorative journeys increased.

The last reason there was an increase in exploration in the years 1558-88 was because of Francis Drake and other privateers. Francis Drake was a privateer class to Elizabeth 30 other sailed to End new places to steal money and invade mips to get England out of their £300,000 debt. This meant, as they get more in debt, Elizabeth demanded more exploration to pay it back and so Drake did this so for her.

Examiner Comment: This response covers three aspects of content but there are issues in each instance. In the first and second paragraphs, which develop the stimulus points, knowledge is vague, although the link to further exploration is explicit. The last paragraph demonstrates stronger subject knowledge but there is only an implicit link to increased exploration. This answer reached the top of Level 2 – 6 marks.

Examiner Tip: Ensure that the evidence you select to answer the question is related back to the conceptual focus.

Examiner Comment: In comparison with the 6-mark example, this response covers very similar points but has achieved a mark in Level 4. The knowledge demonstrated is more detailed and links back to the question are therefore more explicit. Although there is some deviation from the focus on the second page, the final part of the paragraph ties its content back to the question. This answer achieved full marks.

Examiner Tip: Select evidence precisely, to help you explain the causes of the event in the question.

Question 5c

Candidates were asked to debate an aspect of Early Elizabethan England history – either the reason for the failure of the Spanish Armada (5(c)(i) or changing attitudes towards the poor Q5(c)(ii). A significant majority of candidates opted to answer Q5(c)(i).

Weaker responses to Q5(c)(i) tended to focus on vague descriptions prompted by the stimulus points, of the impact of bad weather and/or fire ships. A common error at this level was to describe fire ships as ships that fired cannons at the Spanish or destroyed their ships, as opposed to breaking their formation. A significant minority of candidates also misapplied their knowledge of improved galleons, perhaps fresh in their minds from answering 5(b), by explaining that the English had larger ships than the Spanish. Many candidates seemed to think Elizabeth was personally responsible for the tactics used.

In the mid-range, knowledge was usually accurate and more detailed, with Drake's Raid on Cadiz, the weakness of the Spanish leadership and England's tactics to attack Spain's crescent formation the most common range of causes explained. However, links to the focus of the question were often left implicit, with candidates not analysing how the Raid on Cadiz had a long-term impact on the Armada's ability to succeed, for example. This, coupled with a tendency to continue adding causes rather than to analyse those already identified, often led to a list-like outcome that lacked coherence or an appreciation of the debate to be had. This was particularly evident in answers where candidates had continued on additional paper: although they clearly knew a lot about the topic, this was not well-deployed to construct an evaluative analysis.

Answers that scored high in Level 3 and in Level 4 were marked in their ability to group causes together and provide a supported judgement that identified key turning points in the event: Spain's inability to secure a deep-water port coupled with the bad weather, for example.

When considering change in attitudes towards the poor in Early Elizabethan England in their responses to Q 5(c)(ii), weaker answers to the question often included material related to the poor from other sections of the course. References to a lack of education and the different leisure pursuits of the poor were common but usually not rewardable above Level 1, due to their lack of connection to the focus of the question.

A small number of candidates developed the Houses of Correction stimulus point by writing about workhouses in Victorian England, displaying a slightly worrying lack of chronological understanding. Candidates that focused on the different categories of poor and/or the treatment of vagabonds tended to achieve slightly higher marks because these were more relevant to the conceptual focus. At Level 2, candidates were able to describe deserving poor and idle poor, the treatment of vagabonds and the work of the Houses of Correction. They were unable to identify or explain how this reflected change or continuity in the reign of Elizabeth.

At Level 3 and above, candidates were able to deploy more specific knowledge in relation to the topic. Common content included the names and dates of the poor legislation that was passed during this time period, although some candidates included references to the later Poor Laws, which were unfortunately not rewardable within the scope of this question. At this level, candidates were more likely to address the concept of change and continuity. Some answers deployed evidence about the lack of change in educational opportunities successfully, here, to exemplify continuity of attitudes. The changing treatment of vagabonds was also widely used.

The best answers were able to identify the nuances in the change of attitudes. For example, they explained that there was little change in the attitudes of the public towards the poor, but that government legislation reflected a softening of approach from the ruling class. Criteria against which judgements were made also sometimes considered change at different times during the period, linking increased poverty with changing attitudes.

Examiner Comment: This response develops from the stimulus points and adds several points of their own. In many cases, this evidence is descriptive, focusing on the events of the Armada, rather than analysing the reasons for its failure. The conclusion is stated and unsupported. However, in the paragraph on the Raid on Cadiz the candidate makes a link back to the conceptual focus and therefore this answer reaches the bottom of Level 3 – 7 marks.

Examiner Tip: Remember to relate your evidence to the conceptual focus of the question regularly throughout your answer to ensure you are writing an answer to the question, rather than a narrative of the topic.

Chosen question number: Question 5(c)(i) 🖾 Question 5(c)(ii) 🔣 I disagree because Elizabeth felt that the poor had been nealected by society. She made for hard put the poor law into action which based people and the money was given to the poor. This charged many people's attitudes broards the poor and mealthy people decided to denote to charities as well as goy the tax. This was an improvement because before many people in society dedn't care or take social responsibility of the poor so it was a huge step- The poor be lasted for 200 years. Another reason why that don't agree with the statement is because most poor south was thereing to according that were properties people were "deserving poor" because hey had tried and tried looking for job appurturities but never found any. They were called the discring poor because they were it begggs so on the street but there was still stigma around beggars as they were reen as Inzy. and some mean It even poor, but frauds. On the other hard I to also the agree that there was little change. becomes ungalando still weren't given the some effection as the deserving poor. Vagaboods would steed instead of looking for jobs and the many people in Elizabethan England didn't appeare of it so , if ungalando were cought they would get whipped publicly and sent to a jail.

I agree that agree with the statement also because the House of Cerrection was a place where the sick and deserving poor would stay while feeking for a job . This was extremely helpful in supporting the poor community as they were able to give them a place to stay and encouraged them to find work. This also helped reduce pourty in Elizabethan England.

Overall there was a lugge change in altitudes howeld the poor due to Elizabeth taking action and area encouraging sometimes society to the take social responsibility over the poor.

Examiner Comment: In this response, the candidate has presented a balanced answer using varied evidence. This could be more precise, for example by naming the legislation described. Although the candidate has recognised the debate, there is a lack of coherence in the response, which might have been avoided by planning the order of the paragraphs before beginning the essay. The judgement has some support but the criteria are left largely implicit. This answer achieved Level 3 – 11 marks.

Examiner Tip: Improve the sense of debate in your essay by writing a short plan before beginning and, in your conclusion, weigh up the different causes against the criteria to make a judgement.
