

B2 – CRIME AND PUNISHMENT

SOURCES 14 – 18 FOR QUESTION 14

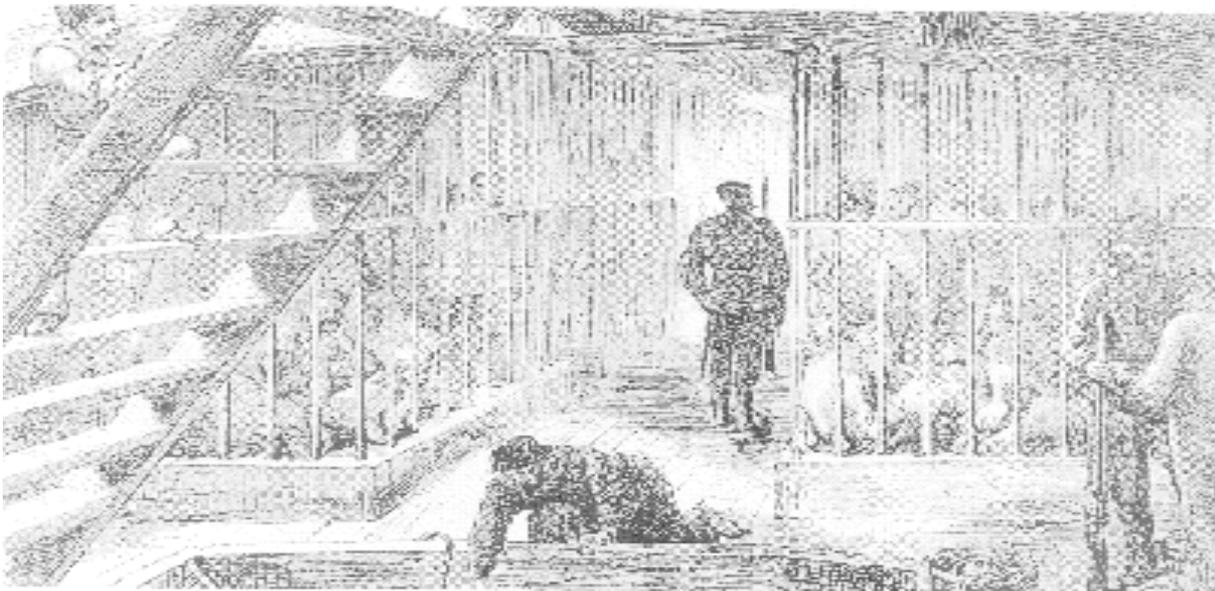

Source 14:

A Sixteenth-century drawing of a wandering musician in the stocks.

Source 15:

A drawing showing prisoners in a prison ship in the 1820's.

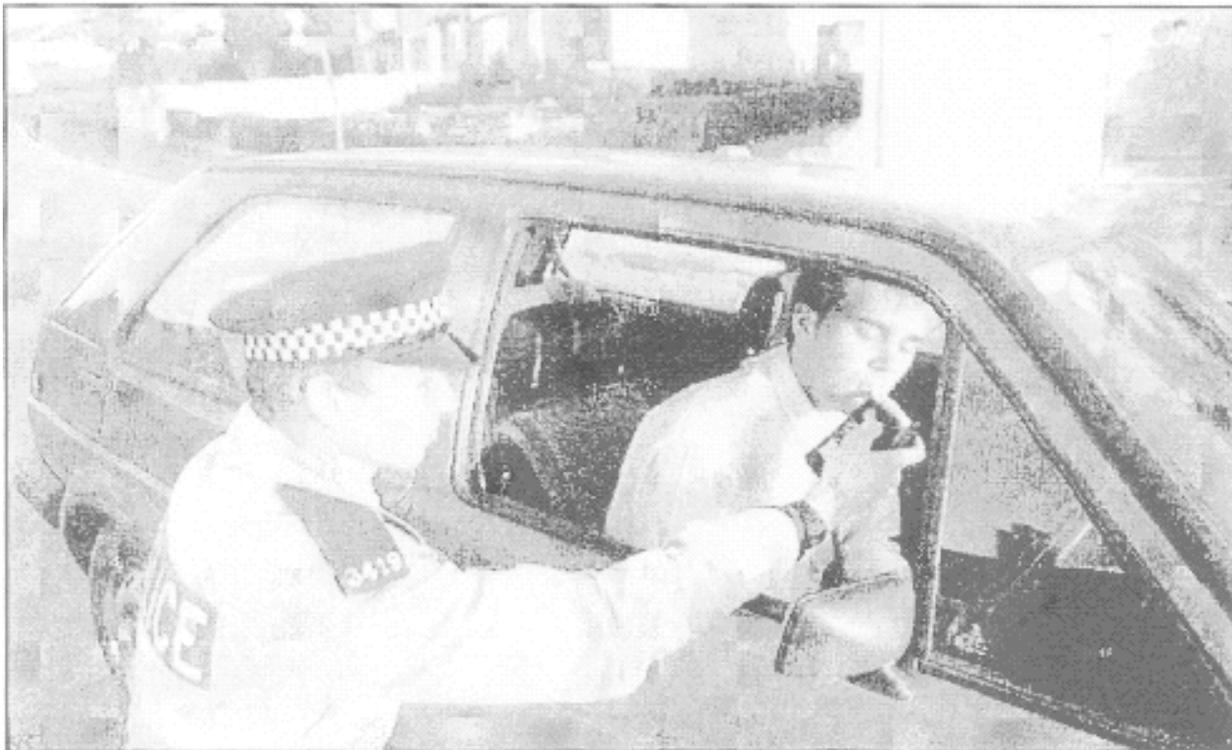

Source 16:

A report to the Duke of Richmond, 1749. The Duke was trying to smash the smuggling gangs.

If any smuggler is taken and the proof is ever so clear against him, no magistrate in the county dare commit him to gaol. If he did he was sure to have his house or barns set on fire, if he was so lucky to escape with his life.

Source 17:

A photograph showing police enforcing the law about drinking and driving in the 1990s.

Source 18:

From 'Crime and Punishment through Time', a textbook published in 1997.

The first motor cars appeared on British roads in 1894; by 1939 60% of all the cases coming before magistrates, and a quarter of all crime, involved motor cars.
