- (b) Negligence can only be claimed when the defendant owes a duty of care to the claimant, has breached that duty and has caused the claimant damage.

Write true next to the three statements below which are accurate descriptions of these rules on claiming in negligence.

A defendant owes a duty of care to someone he could foresee would be harmed by his negligent acts.
A defendant owes a general duty to the whole world.
A breach of duty means falling below the standard of care which is appropriate to the duty the defendant owes.
The standard of care is usually measured against the standards of 'the reasonable man'.
The damage need not be caused by the defendant as long as the defendant has breached his duty.
A claimant can recover compensation from the defendant for any damage caused, however unforeseeable it is.

2 Read each of the following three situations and complete activity a) and activity b) which follow them.

- (i) Sarah bought a new pair of jeans from a clothes shop. The seams split down both legs the first time that Sarah wore the jeans so that she cannot use them. The clothes shop is refusing to give Sarah her money back.
 - (ii) Elaine contracted with a building firm to build an extension on the back of her kitchen for £20,000. The builders carelessly failed to put in adequate foundations and as a result the extension leans at an angle to the house. Another builder has told Elaine that the extension is likely to fall down. Elaine does not want to pay the original builder.
 - (iii) Martin bought a tent which was described as 'suitable for all weather conditions'. The first time Martin used the tent rain poured in through the canvas. Martin wants his money back.
- (a) Identify which statutory implied term from either the Sale of Goods Act 1979 or the Supply of Goods and Services Act 1982 is involved in each of the above situations.

(i) Sarah:

3 (a) Read the following passage and fill in the missing words from the list below.

- manufacturer
- retailer
- defect
- goods
- contract
- tort

In a negligence claim for defective goods the claimant cannot claim from the

..... for replacement goods or for return of the price of the

..... . This is because law would be used to recover these losses from the seller of the goods.

(b) Read the following passage.

Mark buys a new electric drill, returns home, reads the manufacturer's instructions on how to use the drill and then plugs it in ready to drill his kitchen wall to put up a cupboard. Because of a defect in the manufacture of the drill, when Mark turns the switch on, the drill explodes burning Mark's hand and face and setting fire to his work surface which will cost £200 to replace. Mark's burns are so bad that he has to go to hospital in a taxi.

Write either negligence or contract in each box in the right hand column of the chart below to state the most appropriate area of law by which to claim compensation.

A claim for the injuries to Mark's hand and his face.
A claim for the cost of pain killers and medication which Mark has to buy because of his injuries.
A claim for the cost of a new electric drill.
A claim for a replacement electric drill.
A claim for the cost of installing a new work surface.
A claim for the taxi fare to the hospital.

- (d) The Consumer Protection Act 1987 gives consumers the chance to sue for a wide range of damage caused by defective products. There are also some types of damage which cannot be claimed for.

Write either claim or no claim in the right hand column of the chart below next to each type of damage indicated.

Damage to property under £275 in value
Death of the claimant
Damage to business property
Damage to the defective product itself
Personal injury to the claimant
Damage to personal property

- (b) Read the following passage.

Jo drove to town to go shopping. She parked in a multi-storey car park. At the barrier Jo had to take a ticket from a machine before the barrier would lift for her to be able to drive in. After shopping, Jo returned to the car park and paid at the pay station. When she got back to her car it had been vandalised and the repairs cost her £2,000. When she tried to claim from the car park, the manager referred her to tiny writing on the back of the ticket which read "See conditions of use of the car park". The manager brought out a copy of the conditions from his office which read "The management accept no liability for any damage to cars or other property of users of the car park".

Explain why Jo will not be bound by this condition.
