Recruitment, Selection and Training

Employers value personal qualities and competencies in their employees and will place importance on these during the interview. Training will be provided by the employer in order to ensure that these qualities and competencies are portrayed by the employee at all times. It is in the best interests of the business to provide a high quality service to all their customers and clients.

Individuals continually pursue lifelong learning in order to develop their existing skills and acquire new ones, which could possibly lead to a better salary. However, lifelong learning can prove to be quite expensive and social commitments and family life may suffer.
