Version 1.0

Mark schemes are prepared by the Lead Assessment Writer and considered, together with the relevant questions, by a panel of subject teachers. This mark scheme includes any amendments made at the standardisation events which all associates participate in and is the scheme which was used by them in this examination. The standardisation process ensures that the mark scheme covers the students' responses to questions and that every associate understands and applies it in the same correct way. As preparation for standardisation each associate analyses a number of students' scripts. Alternative answers not already covered by the mark scheme are discussed and legislated for. If, after the standardisation process, associates encounter unusual answers which have not been raised they are required to refer these to the Lead Assessment Writer.

It must be stressed that a mark scheme is a working document, in many cases further developed and expanded on the basis of students' reactions to a particular paper. Assumptions about future mark schemes on the basis of one year's document should be avoided; whilst the guiding principles of assessment remain constant, details will change, depending on the content of a particular examination paper.

Further copies of this mark scheme are available from aqa.org.uk

Level of response marking instructions

Level of response mark schemes are broken down into levels, each of which has a descriptor. The descriptor for the level shows the average performance for the level. There are marks in each level.

Before you apply the mark scheme to a student's answer read through the answer and annotate it (as instructed) to show the qualities that are being looked for. You can then apply the mark scheme.

When a student responds with more responses than are required by the question you should mark all responses and then credit only the response that is worthy of the highest credit. For example, when students are asked to identify and explain one example but provide more, all should be marked but only the best example credited.

Step 1 Determine a level

Start at the lowest level of the mark scheme and use it as a ladder to see whether the answer meets the descriptor for that level. The descriptor for the level indicates the different qualities that might be seen in the student's answer for that level. If it meets the lowest level then go to the next one and decide if it meets this level, and so on, until you have a match between the level descriptor and the answer. With practice and familiarity you will find that for better answers you will be able to quickly skip through the lower levels of the mark scheme.

When assigning a level you should look at the overall quality of the answer and not look to pick holes in small and specific parts of the answer where the student has not performed quite as well as the rest. If the answer covers different aspects of different levels of the mark scheme you should use a best fit approach for defining the level and then use the variability of the response to help decide the mark within the level, ie if the response is predominantly level 3 with a small amount of level 4 material it would be placed in level 3 but be awarded a mark near the top of the level because of the level 4 content.

Step 2 Determine a mark

Once you have assigned a level you need to decide on the mark. The descriptors on how to allocate marks can help with this. The exemplar materials used during standardisation will help. There will be an answer in the standardising materials which will correspond with each level of the mark scheme. This answer will have been awarded a mark by the Lead Examiner. You can compare the student's answer with the example to determine if it is the same standard, better or worse than the example. You can then use this to allocate a mark for the answer based on the Lead Examiner's mark on the example.

You may well need to read back through the answer as you apply the mark scheme to clarify points and assure yourself that the level and the mark are appropriate.

Indicative content in the mark scheme is provided as a guide for examiners. It is not intended to be exhaustive and you must credit other valid points. Students do not have to cover all of the points mentioned in the Indicative content to reach the highest level of the mark scheme. Examples of additional relevant responses will be discussed at standardisation. If you have any doubts you should contact your team leader for clarification.

An answer which contains nothing of relevance to the question must be awarded no marks.

Examiners are required to assign each of the students' responses to the most appropriate level according to its overall quality, and then allocate a single mark within the level. When deciding upon a mark in a level examiners should bear in mind the relative weightings of the assessment objectives (see page 4) and be careful not to over/under credit a particular skill. This will be exemplified and reinforced as part of examiner training.

Assessment Objectives

AO1	Demonstrate knowledge and understanding of sociological theories, concepts, evidence and methods.
AO2	Apply knowledge and understanding of sociological theories, concepts, evidence and methods.
AO3	Analyse and evaluate sociological theories, concepts, evidence and methods in order to construct arguments, make judgements and draw conclusions.

Indicative content AO1

- The flexibility of unstructured interviews as a research method.
- The quality of data.
- Response rates.
- Validity.

Indicative content AO2

- Unstructured interviews allow the researcher the flexibility to investigate a line of enquiry into family relationships that may not have been anticipated.
- Qualitative (in-depth data) on family relationships can be gathered.
- Unstructured interviews avoid some of the problems with alternative methods of investigating family relationships eg a low response rate to questionnaires.
- Validity is increased as unstructured interviews allow rapport to build giving more information on family relationships.

Functions of the family (students select one function – accept relevant alternatives):

- sexual
- reproductive
- economic
- educational
- primary socialisation
- stabilisation of adult personalities

Indicative content AO2

Investigating using questionnaires:

- Design a questionnaire that addresses the selected function.
- Identify a representative sample of families who would be willing to complete a questionnaire on the selected function (obtain informed consent).
- Alternatively distribute a large number of postal or on-line questionnaires on the selected function, compensate for sample size (low response rate) and ensure that the final sample is representative.
- Analyse the questionnaire data looking for patterns and trends relating to the selected function.

- Feminist theories of marriage as still largely of greater benefit to men and exploitative of women.
- Marxist theories of the modern family eg critical views of the modern family as a prop to the capitalist economy artificially separating and isolating personal life from the wider society.
- Concerns about the decline in marriage.
- Survey data on women in employment.
- Changing attitudes of women towards their role in the home and beyond eg expectations of equally shared domestic tasks.
- The changing legal status of women eg divorce, employment.
- Roles varying across different cultures/ethnic groups.
- The persistence of the traditional role of women as carers.
- The persistence of traditional family forms eg women as stay at home mothers.

Indicative content AO1

- Marxism.
- Feminism.
- Survey data.
- Extended families.
- Alternative factors.
- Social class.

Indicative content AO2

- Marxist theories of the continued importance of social class in relation to marriage and family life.
- Feminist theories of the relative importance of patriarchy and the continuance of traditional male attitudes towards the role of women in the family.
- Survey data indicating differences between social classes in their experience of marriage and family life.
- Changes in the extended family and the break-up of traditional working class communities.
- Alternative factors e.g. the significance of ethnicity and cultural variations in family life irrespective of social class.
- Social class differences in family relationships and the experience of family life e.g. middle-class dual-income professional households as compared to working-class single income households.

Indicative content AO3

- Analysis and evaluation of Marxist theories.
- Analysis and evaluation of Feminist theories.
- Analysis and evaluation of relevant survey data.
- Analysis and evaluation of evidence relating to the changing nature of family life e.g. the relative decline of the extended family and the impact of social and economic change on traditional working class communities.
- Analysis and evaluation of alternative factors.
- Analysis and evaluation of social class differences in family relationships and the experience of family life.
- Evidence based judgements and conclusions relating to the issue of extent (how far would sociologists agree) e.g. in the judgement of the student how far does the evidence support the premise of the question that social classes continue to have

Indicative content AO1

Possible labels (students select one label - accept relevant alternatives):

- troublemaker
- difficult student
- problem student

Indicative content AO2

Impact on school career:

- The label becomes a master status eg the student becomes known as, for example, a ‘troublemaker’ above all else and damaging their chance of academic success.
- The student’s sense of self is affected eg the student begins to see themselves as others see them and refuses to complete work or behave in class (again with negative consequences for their education).
- A self-fulfilling prophecy is created eg the student’s deviant identity becomes the controlling one; they cause trouble because they expect to and it is expected of them by others.
- The student underperforms academically and is subject to sanctions that can further damage their educational career eg exclusion.

- The Marxist perspective of Bowles and Gintis eg the correspondence principle which holds that the education system serves the needs of those who control the workforce.
- The hidden curriculum as a force for shaping the future workforce eg obedience to authority, motivation by rewards. Functionalist alternative views emphasise the positive benefits of education eg social mobility.
- Elements of the formal curriculum encourage independence and critical thought and are not directly related to the needs of the economy eg humanities and arts.
- Survey data on subject choices indicating the continued popularity of subjects which do not directly reflect the needs of the economy eg arts based subjects.

Indicative content AO3
