- 2. Question Reuse Mode: Callout 2 points to the 'All Items' radio button. The text indicates that 'Used Only' is selected by default.
- 3. Select Question Content: Callout 3 points to the 'Question Difficulty' section, specifically the 'All' checkbox. 10 Questions - Take time to complete each problem AND review the answer explanations, even for the problems you got correct.

After each session, you should create quizzes in the Quiz Bank in order to get in-format practice with GMAT questions. Here are some guidelines for crafting your Quiz Bank quizzes for this session:

- 1 Quiz Style: Tutor Mode –Untimed. (Use untimed quizzes first to first focus on mastery.
- 2 Question Reuse Mode: All Items
- 3 Select Question Content: Question Difficulty – All, Problem Solving – All
- 4 Quiz Bank will calculate available questions for you
- 5 Number of Questions: 10

• You may opt to practice with higher- or lower-difficulty questions or to use slightly shorter or longer quizzes. In the earlier stages of your studies, you may focus on shorter quizzes (5–10 questions) with lower-difficulty questions. Once you build momentum in the course, push yourself by completing longer quizzes (15–20 questions).

• Note: During the Quantitative Strategy Session, you learned various strategies for approaching Problem Solving and Data Sufficiency questions. You will not be able to use those strategies to solve every question on these quizzes. Part of the goal of your homework assignments will be to practice identifying when to apply each strategic approach.

13 HOURS

Congratulations, you have completed your first block of about 13 hours of study! As we've mentioned, you can think of it as a math problem: If you put in 60 minutes of study time every weekday, and then take part in 4-hour study sessions on Saturday and Sunday, that's 13 hours of prep in a week. Multiply that by 13 weeks, and you're looking at over 150 hours of studying. Put the time in, and we're betting you'll see positive results on the other end.
