

Examiners' Report Principal Examiner Feedback

June 2022

Pearson Edexcel International GCSE In History (4HI1) Paper 2B

Edexcel and BTEC Qualifications

Edexcel and BTEC qualifications are awarded by Pearson, the UK's largest awarding body. We provide a wide range of qualifications including academic, vocational, occupational and specific programmes for employers. For further information visit our qualifications websites at www.edexcel.com or www.btec.co.uk. Alternatively, you can get in touch with us using the details on our contact us page at www.edexcel.com/contactus.

Pearson: helping people progress, everywhere

Pearson aspires to be the world's leading learning company. Our aim is to help everyone progress in their lives through education. We believe in every kind of learning, for all kinds of people, wherever they are in the world. We've been involved in education for over 150 years, and by working across 70 countries, in 100 languages, we have built an international reputation for our commitment to high standards and raising achievement through innovation in education. Find out more about how we can help you and your students at: www.pearson.com/uk

Summer 2022
Publications Code 4HI1_2B
All the material in this publication is copyright
© Pearson Education Ltd 2022

General Comments

Paper 2B offers an unusual challenge in as much as its two separate Sections test different assessment objectives with significantly different question types.

Section A comprises three questions. Question part (a) focuses on Assessment Objective 1 testing knowledge and understanding of the characteristics of the period studied. Question parts (b) and (c) address Assessment Objectives 3 and 4 with candidates asked to consider two historical sources and a modern extract before answering questions based on cross-reference and evaluation of a historical interpretation.

In Question part (a) most candidates signpost their answer by beginning their paragraphs with 'one feature' 'a second feature' etc. This is good exam practice and saves the examiner having to determine whether there are two features being addressed. Whilst detailed answers are encouraged, some candidates continue to write more than is necessary. Although there are two pages allocated for this answer, focused, concise responses can reach Level 3 in much less than one side and save valuable time for the higher tariff questions.

In Question part (b) the majority of candidates demonstrate an understanding that they should be exemplifying agreement and difference (or disagreement) either by quoting or paraphrasing the sources. An increasing number of candidates are considering the extent of support but some of them are not providing rewardable support. It is not enough to repeat the areas of agreement and difference and then make a judgement of 'partial' agreement. Instead candidates should look for evidence of the depth of support or difference. How strongly is the case made in the source? Is there a difference in tone or overall message, as opposed to just detail?

What is not required, however, is a consideration of the reliability of the individual sources. What candidates are asked to do is compare what the sources say, not whether what is said is trustworthy.

Question part (c) asks the candidates to consider a historical interpretation and the extent to which they agree with it, based on what the sources and extract tell them and their own contextual knowledge. The most effective way of beginning to answer this question is to establish what it is the extract says about the given interpretation and consider whether it in any way contains contradictory information. If so, this should be used as part of the counterargument. Having said that, candidates should be careful about how they use the information in the extract. There is clearly a problem with arguing that the interpretation given in Extract X is correct because there is information in Extract X which supports it. Valid support for the interpretation must come from the two sources and the candidate's own knowledge- as must evidence disputing what the interpretation says.

Centres are reminded that to reach the highest marks candidates need to reach a judgement on the validity of the interpretation. Many candidates leave this aspect of their answer until a concluding final paragraph, but best responses are often those which state their position at the beginning of their response and follow it through in each paragraph.

Centres often ask about common errors in candidates' responses. Reference has been made above to some of those errors, but the below may provide a useful summary.

- In Part ((a) candidates sometimes provide over-lengthy responses or fail to make it clear that they are providing information on two separate features. Judgements are often left to a short summary at the end.
- In Part (b) candidates may show that there are similarities and differences in the sources, but fail to support their statements with information from the sources (though this is not possible where the suggestion is that one source says something which the other does not).
 Best answers sometimes explain similarity and difference but do not go on to consider the extent of the agreement/disagreement.
- In Part (c) candidates sometimes fail to address both sides of the argument, or interrogate the sources/extract in sufficient detail to find support and opposition to the hypothesis. Contextual knowledge is not always used to support arguments, leaving responses as little more than a source/extract audit. Judgements are often left to a short summary at the end.

Section B focuses on Assessment Objectives 1 and 2 with an emphasis on change and causation.

Part (a) asks for a candidates to explain two ways in which an aspect of a country's history in one period was different from (or similar to) another period. In this year's examination, comparison between the two periods was stronger, rather than leaving the examiner to work out the differences from a narrative account of the aspect in both periods. There seemed to be an increase in the use of 'comparative vocabulary', such as 'similarly' or 'whereas' in helping demonstrate similarity or difference. This is to be encouraged.

Part (b) asks candidates to consider the causes of change. Most candidates are very much at ease with this type of question, though once again this year, many responses gave the reasons for change but did not explain why those reasons brought about the change. For example, in B2 the question asked why penicillin developed. Most candidates wrote on the work of Fleming or Florey and Chain and gave an account of the US government providing funding. Perhaps they considered the answer self-evident, but many of those candidates did not go on to give an explicit account of why this work or funding led to the development of penicillin.

Part (c) asks candidates to consider the extent of change or the causes of that change. Sometimes this is phrased as the extent to which an event or development might have been the key turning point. The evidence from this year's paper suggests that candidates have a good understanding of how to address such questions and that they appreciate that to score in the higher levels, they must bring factors into their responses which are additional to the two stimulus points given in the question.

Centres are reminded that in accessing responses, examiners consider:

- the quality of explanation in answering the question
- the use of contextual knowledge in supporting the explanation
- the candidate's overall judgement and justification of that judgement.

There were many responses which addressed all three of these criteria at a high level and received significant reward.

Common Errors

A summary of common errors is as follows:

- In Part (a) candidates sometimes respond in a way which fails to make comparisons, thus leaving the response as two separate, unrelated paragraphs.
- In Part (b) candidates sometimes provide unnecessary detail instead of restricting their answer to explaining causes. Answers often don't explicitly state why the cause led to the stated outcome.
- In Part (c) candidates may answer well on the given topics, but fail to bring a third topic into their answer. Candidates sometimes fail to provide an explanation of how the hypothesis may be supported and opposed. Judgements are often left to a short summary at the end and do not always include a consideration of the extent to which the candidate agrees or disagrees with the hypothesis..

Example Responses

This report provides an example of a top response for each of the three question sub-parts. Examples have been provided from the three most popular options in the expectation that centres will be able to apply the approach shown in each example to their own chosen option.

Individual Questions

Section A

There were very few responses to the questions on Topic A5, with most candidates having been prepared for The First World War (Question A1), Russia and the Soviet Union (Question A2) the USA (Question A3) and Vietnam (Question A4).

In Question A1 part (a), there was a preference for the system of alliances, which was well-known. Candidates who answered on the Allied drive to victory scored less well, with some candidates confusing it with Ludendorff's Offensive. Almost all candidates found similarity and difference between Source A and B in part (b), though answers were not always supported with detail from the sources. Agreement on the need to support business interests was well-covered, as was the fact that Source A did not support what Source B says about the aim to split France and Britain. In part (c), most candidates acknowledged that business interests were part of the German motivation and some developed the argument to talk about colonial acquisition to gain raw materials. Best answers took their answer further, using contextual knowledge to explain the historical context of the Moroccan Crisis and its part in the Great Power rivalry of the time.

Candidate response

This response scored at the top of L3. Two features were identified and excellent supporting material was provided

You must answer ONE question.

You should spend about 45 minutes on this question.

Indicate which question you are answering by marking a cross in the box \boxtimes . If you change your mind, put a line through the box \boxtimes and then indicate your new question with a cross \boxtimes .

Chosen question number:	Question A1	Question A2	Question A3 🖾
	Question A4 🖾	Question A5 🖾
(a) One feature of the system of alliances and ententes was the Triple Alliance formed between Germany, Austria-Hungary and Tealy.
Firstly, the Dual Alliance between Germany and Austria-Hungary was famed in 1879. Germany was concerned about a war on two fronts with France and Russia, so farmed an alliance.
Austria-Hungary was concerned about the graving nationalism in its empire and feared Russian intervention. Tealy joined their alliance in 1882, as they were convinced by Austria-Hungary to join (they wanted to prevent Italy from joining the Allies). And encircling than from the South as well.
Another feature of the system of alliances and enterues was the Triple Entente formed between France, Russia and Britain.
Both France and Russia were concerned about the alliances made against Hem, so famed the Franco-Russian alliance in 1892.
Britain and France Hen formed the Entente Cordiale in 1904 after they amended their dispute over Egypt. In 1907, Russia and Britain farmed the Anglo-Russian Entente = The combination of the Franco-Russian Alliance, Entente Cardiale and Anglo-Russian Entente formed the Triple Entente between the Allied powers.

In Question A2 part (a), the reluctance of Nicholas to work with the Dumas and his antipathy towards them was covered by most candidates. There was also good knowledge of the reasons why NEP was so unpopular with many Bolsheviks. In part (b) candidates found it easier to explain similarity than difference and the was some misunderstanding of Source A, where a number of candidates read the source as saying the Provisional Government must be obeyed. There were some excellent responses in part (c), though candidates must take care that where they have extensive contextual knowledge, they do not allow this to cause them to overlook what is said in the two sources and the extract.

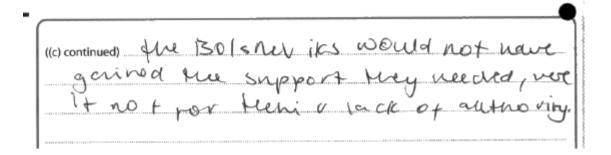

Candidate response

This answer comfortably reached the top of L4.It began with a judgement which is supported throughout the response. A variety of reasons for the overthrow of the Provisional Government was explained and there was an excellent conclusion.

(c) its opposition. Source is declares that The micitary orders of the Provisioned Government will be carried out oney where they do not conflict with the orders of the Source Despive this attempt at control, poor decision who made. The mini stor of war, kerenge was also - nember of the Detrogram Soviet, and sify this authority be launched the Time Offensive 60,000 troops were killed by the Gromans, sporking outrage These poor decisions any boo sted the rate of desertion, which ned been incresing rapidly now that the death senalty har ken semoved pen and In distred. The lack of land reforms dark Took contined he " eco no mic crisis peasants, having expected land reporms, continued to only produce good for humsely and size land from the nobes. These p decisions were not only due to the fact to the Government pert it diden't have fe authoring to impose change, but also due to the fact that it was run by upper-dass di chators" Exc. Mostart Government was of the land owning class, meaning they did not want to redistribute it to

((c) continued) peasants, but as saver B states, " for poses" as continuing www 1 growing only way to be preceiving reported on from the allies. The re Aprox poor decisions, and in "Food and fuel snortages "Exc), sh bread rutioning in Oct 1917 pell to 1/416, goe led to great ange knoong he people, nating his their biggest problem. It can als o be argued that their dealing win of position was the main isone, as this allowed hu Bolshevits to gain support, hadingto their overthrowin the Outober levourion. The June offensive spiled to the July Days, where on 3-4 July, thousands here protesting in Petrogrady including namy Bolshvirs, despir Lenin's objections. After the profestors are shot at on 317 July and arrested, Coursky began to have somet sith General Kornilor, was wanted to estabish a mi witery dictertors to contro! the masses. He was fixed and movemed on Petrograd on 2 Bh Dangust, the Bolow viks were released from prison and the red grand given use pons. Their

((c) continued) Kornilov was and his Kossacts never reacted petro grad and the Bolderics uler ran as heroe, lenin then contined to gain support through his April theses, whe on 16 km of the pris he not only called for peace and an end to the "unterase" livingondi hons, but also for "au pare to be transpersed to the Soviets, " Though Mis, they managed to gain 800k supporters, leading to Levin de ciding to 10014 he porty congression 10 Deg cagainet the viewso, January and Zino view, water the Prov Gov's poor housting of apposition red to thir do water. in conclusion, the lack of authority was the main problem of the Prov Gov, as it led to the actions which can sed the most anger. While thirs poor dicisions did norbour content, it was merinly due to heir lack of authority that they jest they could not make before den sions. Similarly, while they did not hands of position well, and were intivately over thousan by the Bolste Mits in the October Wyoluhian,

In Question A3 candidates seemed to very-much enjoy writing about the more 'modern' lifestyle and dress of the flappers. Where they remembered that they were asked to give two features of the flappers (one of which could validly have been that they were very much in the minority) high marks were awarded. The opposition of the Supreme Court was rarely attempted, but when it was, candidates seemed to have good knowledge. Part (b) presented few problems with answers generally focusing on the fairness of the trial. In part (c) some candidates wandered a little from discussion of whether the conviction of the two men was a result of them being foreigners into whether it was a result of them being 'Reds'. Fortunately, such answers, provided similar arguments to those about foreigners and no real damage was done.

Candidate response

This response scored in the top level. Similarity and difference were both identified, explained and supported from the sources. The candidate also considered the extent of the support, concluding that Source B supported Source C, only to a 'slight' extent.

(b) Source A egree supports course B to a Slight exent because they both agree that the Sacco and Vanzett that was fair.

Source A states that 'Sacco and Vanzetti had a thoroughly fair that 'This supports

Source B as source B cays 'It is not true that the authorities Axed the that to find them quilty of a crime carrying the death peattly penalty Therefore source

A supports source B as both say that the trai was fair and they were Convicted properly without bias.

How Movever source A only supports B

Suightly because source A states that

The 'Reak didn't have conthing to do with the than where whereas source B

says that the fact that they were toreign heuped their veraict. Source A says

The than was about murder and robbery and had nothing to do with 'Redness'

whereas source B says they we low class foreigners, labour agitarors, and the admitted to being the 'reddet of Rods' therefore source A doesn't support B as B states that their than was oftened by the 'Reds'

((b) continued) whereas source A says it work.

In concustory source A supports source B to a slight extent because annough Source A and B state than the trian was fair and the pert processor courtroom was it bassed bassed brased, 4 source A states than the trian was it influenced by the 'Rods' whereas source B says
That it was:

There was a significant increase in the number of candidates attempting Question A4 in this year's exam. Life in South Vietnam under Diem was particularly well-known. Hearts and Minds was less popular and some candidates confused it with a desire to win support from the public in the USA. Similarity and difference in what Sources A and B said about the results of the Tet Offensive was covered well and most candidates appreciated the subtlety behind suggesting in part (c) that the American victory might not really have been a success.

Section B

There were very few responses to the questions on Topics B1, B3, B5 and B6, with most candidates answering on Medicine (B2), China (B4) and The Middle East (B7).

In Question B2 part (a), where candidates had a sound grasp of chronology, high reward was achieved by explaining developments in x-rays and blood storage, or those brought about by war, such as plastic surgery and improvements in brain surgery. Where candidates lacked precise knowledge, they tended to fall back on general comments about the work of Simpson, Lister, Koch and Pasteur. The reasons for the development of penicillin (part (b) were well-known with detailed accounts of the work of Fleming, Florey and Chain and of US funding. Some candidates wrote about the need for penicillin, though this was not, in itself a reason for its development. Answers to the part (c) questions showed an excellent understand of developments in medical treatment and public health in the years 1845-75, though sometimes candidates showed some confusion about the difference between the two terms.

Candidate response

This response scored at the top of L3. Two reasons for the development of penicillin are discussed and how those reasons contributed to the given outcome is explained.

(b) one cause for the development of penicillin was the role of teamwork Key individuals where involved - Fleming Florey, Chain and Heathey. Fleming discovered penicillin in 1928? However Ave to lack of funding wouldn't denine 5t Another. Chain, Heat Yey and Florey dereloped it at extord uninesity. They created a presomple with the help at ped pans and Epenicillin girls. As a result, the rested it on childs rous and Albert Alexander. Which caused them to realise how important un Tit's use without them building on each otherer work, penicillin worlding have been disopored. Therefore, one cause was the role of knowwork Amon cause for the development of peniation Was A no ther cause for the development of penicipin was the role of theis government and funding After finding -out it's use, they couldn't great funding from Great Britain in order to mase produce it if they had no finding, then they couldn't produce it and it would be even harder to make and distribute

((b) continued) However, the US government and horma certical companies agreed development. with were able to develop pure ramples test it out on people Mak cillin safe and trusted. peo ple o recognize it's ay campaigh, where Some of 15% of the SULVIVAL. unding, at have used penicill be dereciped and not one cause of the elopment was funding Question B4 saw some excellent responses. Part (a) was particularly well argued with students showing a good understanding of the impact of 1950 Marriage Law and able to explain the greater role of women in politics as a result of policies introduced by the CCP. Good knowledge was also shown of the cause of student unrest (part (b)). Disillusionment with the policies of the CCP, overseas education, poor living conditions and the treatment of Wei Jingsheng and Hu Yaobang were all used to explain the outbreak of student protest, though the events in Tiananmen Square might be more accurately be seen as a consequence of student unrest than the cause of it. C(ii) was the more popular of the part (c) questions, though there were good responses on the changing nature of Sino-Soviet relations. Part c(ii) was particularly well-answered with some excellent analysis of the impact of the First Five-year Plan, , the Great Leap Forward, the Cultural Revolution and Deng's modernisation policies. Most impressive was the ability of many candidates to justify their judgements with precise details of the comparative impact of the various policies.

Candidate response

This response scored at the top of L4. It is not expected that candidates will necessarily write as extensively as this candidate, but it may be informative to see how the very best answers to Part (c) questions set up an argument, use contextual knowledge to address that argument throughout the response and then reach a reasoned conclusion.

(c)(i) OR (c)(ii) Although I would online the first fire year I an was and some wour significent arrange in me chinese economy between 1949 to 1984, I would deque other factor such a the greet leap forward (1958) and Deng's economic pourcies (por 1978) had a greater effect with the kay and most succetful furning point wing peng's economic reforms. The first five year plan was inhoduced in 1952 and and ricentral lasted until 1957, Mas believed economic policies recently in hoodused tuck as mutual circl teams and agricultural procluses as operatives werend increase output and arow for incurration to no get it was the right the 6 moderne andi mounty. The plan focused on the rapid expansion of heavy industry lich as tron, heel load and behaleur and represented a significant change as China Looked to were from traditional and old-fermined memore to a modern and more epicient economy. It also included continection projects ruch as A word and rail bridge ut me Yangte mer at Nanjing. Some experts come to china to provide mad with the thorredge required to counch his industralbation programme. The relieb of the port live your pion were phenomenal's electrical power production tripled, coal productin doubted and treet production quadrasped, and a wen it prompted a positive change in counci's economy.

year plan asmenimened men sociation her more successive than the post five than the property of the property o

Another factor which prompted great energy in china's economy was the innoduction of the grout bag forward in 1958, who oup this who keasely rejulted in automaintal Panapication for council economy. Liminasopi announced the great leap forward to the 8th party congres in may 1958 and was declared most polluly the cuma would overtice Britaine as a leading industrial penor in lev than 15 year. The plan twolucied the involvement of the x00 whole population in moderising both the economy and he agriculture multuneowy 600000 furnace were set up in $0 8-baceyad and consumianon of agriculture freed $ 700 natural security mb one of 26 000 communes across china. Horcever, all prumping were taken over by the there and pinkers organ companies was about the of, it represented a rapid advancing into a truly socialist state. However, the great leap forward marked a knerry regionize enough for the curese economy, bactyard privace itsel was poor quality and had be prown away (although I million bone were produced in 1958, collectivitation of agriculture resulted in a family which could the death of 50 million and indultral proclueter decembed due to a lack of profit mother in early 1959 head admitted the files

((c)(i) OR (c)(ii) continued) of the operant feet focusora and continued on so will building as an economic promor tollowing two he stepped down on tread of state. The great leap forward marked a negative tunning point in cuma's economy and required year or recovery to get it back on track. Frally, what I would argue you the most significant change and key himmy point in the economy was bond, econonic policies. Dong was appointed paramount leader of China in october 1978 and unlike Man to repured to be been down by contricting communist rection, he famously suice " It close not matter whether the cost a black or where is long to it catenor the nuice it is a ground cat inclimently his support for capitalist policies. When he chured gone to aired to mocernic Chara's mounty encourage foreign investment in china and develop latematical todae, he repeated commune with Kingy (ariginal town / villages) und relited and to pecuant Le 15 year each trong had a queter to fire for the government met could sell any extra for projet, Deng hoped tur would increase agricultral output to allow the population to suppresse to like for industrial path. to also unoduced provabilation of linellisting, SETS (special economic Zones) were established in coastal own where the trancy trong and tailing maket has easily accessible

((c)(i) OR (c)(ii) continued) and an first foresty were the only encouraged in expert inclusives but by 1984 due to it being so succeital it was allowed in home industvies too. ("uma") expert youth grew 500% in me FADS and this was aided by giving exports but concession and freedom of some procurcicu bans. Although for the most port the owned neuros) the whole population welcomed Deng's policies, some SOEA hower opposed them as they wed to ware an 'Ivon tice bout'wage regarder of output but now become hew based on modulation, their prover meant that a new working contract bated on surpur could not be innoclured until 1986 and JOE, remained Inefficient. Despite this, greated Dong's polities innulated a valt hupmovement in cuma's agriculturant and industrial production and represented the key thrushy point in me economy how 1944 to 89. To conclude, Whilt he por pre year plan and cause a change in chinais economy I would argue for improvements it thinulated were mostly undone by the climate of the great leap forward which prompted an mmensely regarive impact on the economy. Consequently, I would contend Deng's in Moderation of capitalist economic policies maked the most significant turning point in the charle economy or me they prompted permonent improvencent.

In Question B7 part (a), most candidates focused on the intentions behind the two proposals, with the Balfour Declaration seen as a political statement designed to elicit support from the Jewish community, whereas the Peel Commission was a more genuine attempt to provide a solution. Other responses noted that, unlike in the Balfour Declaration, the Peel Commission had come to accept that the two communities could not live together. Candidates readily found two reasons for the Second Intifada, most commonly in the failure of the Oslo Accords and Sharon's provocative speech at Temple Mount. A minority of candidates attempted c(ii) and some were obviously challenged by the requirement to assess the significance of Kissinger's work. Most were uncritically in favour of his efforts. C (i) was more popular and better answered, with the majority of candidates arguing that the Suez Crisis led to the replacement of the influence of Britain and France in Egypt with that of the USA and the Soviet Union.

Candidate response

This response scored in L3. It provided a succinct, yet precise, explanation of differences between the terms of the Balfour Declaration and the terms of the Peel Commission Report.