Your diet will show on your report card

An army marches on its stomach. So do students ahead of their examinations. Nutrition plays an important role to keep them fit and healthy. Food has the ability to affects sleep patterns, mood and fatigue of students and it is important that the right nutrition is available at the right time.

Some tips on diet during exam time:

- Keep the meals light and frequent.
- Always keep some healthy snacks, like fruits or nuts handy.
- Since it is summer, one needs to drink plenty of water to offset dehydration.
- Try to eat home cooked food.
- Hygiene is compromised when eaten outside and one may fall sick with an upset stomach.
- Do not try anything new either in the form of food or supplements as it may cause allergy.

During exams, students' stress levels shoot up leading to anxiety and irregular eating habits. While some eat more under pressure, others completely ignore eating, which in turn reduces the immunity level, causes infection makes them lethargic thus affecting their performance. Eating milk products, fresh fruit and green leafy vegetables provide the needed nutrition" said Dr.ArchanaNazre, dietician and nutritionist, BGS Global Hospitals. Snacks or a glass of milk is necessary for students who study late. Otherwise they would wake up on an empty stomach and feel faint. "While choosing carbohydrates, one should choose from whole grains, starchy vegetable etc instead of simple sugar, which gives instant bursts of energy, but also leads to a sugar drop, which causes lethargy and drowsiness," said Jyothi Prasad, chief dietician, Manipal Hospital.

Intake of adequate amount of protein is important during exams, since it enhances the neurotransmitters that help in generating concentration, said SheelaKrishnaswamy, diet, nutrition and wellness consultant and director, Board of International Confederation of Dietetic Associations (ICDA).

"At least 500 ml of dairy products is a must for any student. That apart, a vegetarian student should take servings of dal sprouts and nuts. Those who can take non-veg food should have a piece of fish or chicken or an egg everyday", she said. Certainnuts have got memory enhancing qualities. A fistful of Walnuts is good as Walnuts contain certain omega 3 fatty acids that help in boosting brain power, said Krishnaswamy.
