HEALTH AND SAFETY AT WORK

Employers and employees must be aware of the need for a healthy and safe working environment, not least in the modern office.

The office can be a stressful place in which to work. Open plan offices are generally noisy. Although computers have replaced typewriters, considerable noise is still generated by people talking to each other either face to face or on the telephone.

Despite the advent of electronic filing, some filing cabinets are still in use. The opening and closing of metal filing cabinet drawers means extra noise is generated.

Many people find the atmosphere of the open plan office less than healthy. Few firms allow people to smoke at work but those who do have constant complaints from non-smoking staff who have to endure the unhealthy atmosphere created by their colleagues.

Computers have made life much easier for the average office administrator. Word processing software allows for ease of correction and amendment of documents whilst spreadsheets, databases and desk top publishing packages enable tedious calculations, searches and display work to be executed accurately and quickly. However, the use of computers can have serious implications for the operators and that means almost everyone employed in the office environment.

People who use computers for long periods should take regular breaks to avoid eye strain and repetitive strain injury. Anti-glare screens and wrist supports are of great assistance in preventing or relieving such problems.

It is essential for all office furniture to be comfortable and ergonomically designed.

Dear Felicitas

I hope you are well and still enjoying working in the department store.

I like my job as a Junior Administrator but the office ^{in which} I work in is very big and, as it is open plan, it can get very noisy. There ~~must be~~ ^{are} at least 40 people in the office and lots of telephones. It seems there is always at least one telephone ringing. [Most of my work is connected with computers. I do a lot of word processing - mostly typing letters, memos and reports but I also have to send lots of e-mails. I find working at the computer very tiring but we are allowed ^{lots of} short breaks so that our eyes are not strained. The firm also gives us adjustable chairs which ensure we do not suffer back problems.]

Next month I am going to learn to do spreadsheets so that I can help out in the finance department.

I am so pleased I took an office studies course at school. What I learned on that course has been really helpful in my job.

L.c. Please write and tell me all about your job. What Kind of customers do you have to serve? Which departments do you prefer to work in? Have you made many new friends?

I do hope we can meet shortly. Until then, please give my regards to your parents.

Your friend
