Dear Betty,

Paul and I arrived in Singapore two days ago. The flight to Singapore was long and tiring.

The next morning, my brother, Jim and his two sons took us to Sentosa. We went by cable car. We visited the Underwater World, Fort Siloso and the Merlion Park.

In the afternoon, we visited the famous Jurong Bird Park. Paul and I were amazed to see the birds flying around. Kenneth and James were thrilled by the bird shows. Paul did not like the parrots. He found their squawking too noisy.

In the evening, we took a stroll in town and saw the beautiful lights along Orchard Road. It was as though we were walking in fairyland!

Betty, I bought a beautiful necklace for you and a collar for your pet, Patch.

Your friend,

That night, after everyone had gone to bed, Clara went downstairs. What she saw made her very frightened. There were lots of mice in the living room. They wanted to attack Clara but suddenly the Nutcracker came to life. He fought bravely with the mice to try and save Clara. However, there were so many mice that the Nutcracker was injured. When Clara saw that, she threw her shoes at the leader of the mice. He fell down. All the other mice quickly ran away.

Just then, the Nutcracker turned into a handsome prince. He took Clara's hand and took her to the Kingdom of Sweets. In the Kingdom of Sweets, many beautiful fairies danced for Clara. The Tree And The Grass

The tree said to the grass that grew next to it, "It is clear to me that you are so weak that even the grasshopper is too heavy for you. No wonder you are always bending down." 5

The tree also said that it was big and strong. No strong wind was able to blow it down. It thought that the grass would be much safer if it grew closer to the tree. It could better protect the grass that way. 10

"I am not afraid of the wind," said the grass, "I bend but I do not break."

That night, there was a fearful storm. The tree remained standing while the grass bent itself in the wind. The wind grew stronger and pulled up the tree. The proud tree was thrown on the ground. 15

When morning came, the grass stood in the sun. It remained shiny and softly dancing in the wind.
