Getting up in the morning is the hardest thing for Johan to do. Every morning, from Monday to Friday, Johan has to get up at six o'clock. He wished he could get up later but the school bus comes to pick him up at six-thirty.

Mother comes into his room at six o'clock sharp to 5 wake him up. When Johan feels her hand shaking him by the shoulder, he groans. He presses his face closer to his nice, soft pillow and snuggles into his nice, warm blanket. However, Mother would not let him go back to sleep. She shakes him impatiently and says loudly, "If you don't get up now, you'll be 10 late for school!"

Johan knows he has to get up, so he sits up slowly.
He stretches himself and yawns. He wished he could continue sleeping! His bed seems most comfortable at this time of the day.
