Not long ago, a cargo ship carrying several thousand pieces of wood was sailing from Malaysia to China. After five days at sea, the ship had a leak. Slowly, the ship began to sink.

"Tie the logs together," ordered the captain. "It's our only chance." Immediately, the sailors followed the captain's order. When the ship sank, they were able to keep afloat by clinging to the logs.

Two days passed. The men suffered from hunger and thirst. They had no food or drink. They also had to bear the heat of the sun in the day and the cold wind at night.

On the third day, one of the men saw the smoke of a passing ship. They waved their hands and began to shout. The ship moved towards them. Soon, they were taken aboard and sent to the hospital. When they had fully recovered, they returned home.

51. Where was the cargo ship sailing to?

52. What caused the ship to sink?

53. Why did the captain order the men to tie the logs together?

54. How did the men get the attention of the passing ship?
