Section F: Comprehension MCQ (5 x 1 mark)

Read the passage carefully and answer the questions based on the passage.

When Mr Michael Wee was 10 years old, he used to hide behind the brick wall and play tricks on the workers. At that point in time, he had little idea that those red bricks that came from his family's factory would line the walls of the 44-year-old National Library in Stamford Road.

Mr Wee's story is one of the contributions submitted to the National Library Board's (NLB's) My Fond Memories book project.

The book will have anecdotes about the old National Library which closed its doors on April 1. "The demolition of a building like that in the near future will have an impact on society," said a NLB staff.

Now 51, Mr Wee, an insurance consultant, has also included three black and white photographs of the building taken in the 1960s. Sharing his memories with The Straits Times, he recollected how the National Library was the furthest place his parents would allow him to visit.

"It was my licence to freedom," said Mr Wee, who, with his schoolmates would try to sneak in with their own revision books to do their studies there.

The NLB welcomes more contributions for the book project from people of all walks of life. Those who wish to send in entries can obtain a submission form at any NLB library, or download it from www.nlb.gov.sg.

Contributions can be in English, Malay, Chinese or Tamil and those who have their works selected for publication will be notified by post as the NLB will not entertain queries through telephone calls.

Section G: Comprehension – Open-ended (5 X 2 marks)

Read the following passage. Then answer the questions that follow.

I made my way through the throng of people. They were milling in front of the exhibits in the Reptile House at New York's Bronx Zoo. Bruce Foster, one of the keepers, rushed to meet me. Sweat soaked his shirt and he stammered so badly that at first I could not understand him. Finally the words emerged. A king cobra had escaped from its cage!

As superintendent of the zoo's reptile collection, I had to act fast. King cobras are among the most poisonous snakes in the world. The poison works quickly. Some victims may survive with treatment, but others may die within minutes.

I immediately asked the visitors to get out of the Reptile House without telling them why while Bruce, with the assistance of three more colleagues, checked all possible hiding places as cobras do not like to be out in the open. I got our supplies of anti-venom ready and arranged for a police car to stand by in case we needed to transport a victim to our specialist clinic at Roosevelt Hospital. I was virtually certain that before this event was over, someone would be bitten. I just prayed that no one would panic should the large reptile that had slithered out of its cage and made its escape be spotted.
